RUSSIAN "REDS" in China are enticing sailors of the American and British warships, seeking to make Bolsheviki of them. It is safe to say that a British or American tar will be difficult to convert to the Communist theory. He believes in getting what he can and keeping what he gets.

BESIDES, Chinese things do not look very real to the honest sailor man.

In London Punch, a sailor on duty, asked by his superior: "Has anybody passed this way?" replies: "Yes, sir, fifty chinks, or maybe the same chink fifty times."

ONE HUNDRED cities and towns are flooded along the lower Mississippi. The total flood damage amounts to two thousand million dollars. Less than half that money, combined with brains and engineering skill, tops of trees above its surface.

THREAT TO KILL FULLER, TWO JUDGES, FAMILIES AND DESTROY HOMES

Death for themselves and their families, and the reduction of their homes to ashes, were threats hurled at Governor Fuller, Judge Webster Thayer and Chief Justice Rugg of the Supreme Court today in a Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers' letter from Chicago.

"If you will execute Sacco and Vanzetti, we are going to murder you, all of your family, and turn your home into ashes; the same we do with your judge and chief justice."

These were the opening words of the murderous missive which was addressed to Governor Fuller and which the chief executive received at his State House office.

At the time this letter arrived, buried deep in a mail sack containing the usual hundreds of petitions for and against the condemned pair, the Governor had in his desk the "appeal for justice" which, sent to him by Bartolomeo Vanzetti, brought the question officially to his notice for the first time.

"Well, what are you going to do?" the Governor was asked by newspapermen.

"I have not made up my mind," he replied.

With these words, he made it plain that his mind is still open on the question. He also intimated, in re-

Death, Fire In Warning to Fuller

HERE is a copy of a "death threat" sent to Governor Fuller from Chicago:

"If you will execute Sacco and Vanzetti, we going to murder you—all of your family—and turn your home into ashes; the same we do with your judge and chief justice as they got our note last week. Our airplanes have a whole success over your home and the homes of your barbars (barbarians?), judge and chief justice. Nobody has got away from us and nobody cannot.

This is a note of thousands and thousand that will fight to death. The French spirit never die—as to tell you again, if you—your judge and chief justice will execute Sacco-Vanzetti, we are going to destroy all of your fellows.

RUTH HANGSHEAD WHILE GRAY ENACTS DEATH SCENE BEFORE JURORS

New York, May 5.—Soon after the cross-examination of Henry Judd Gray began today, his mother, Mrs. Margaret Gray, collapsed in the courtroom. Gray was startled when he saw his mother carried from the room, but went on with his story. Mrs. Gray was taken to a restroom and an ambulance doctor called from St. John's Hospital, near the courthouse.

Long Island City, N. Y., May 5 (A.P.).—Henry Judd Gray rose on the witness stand at the Snyder murder trial today and demonstrated how he had wielded the sashweight with which he beat Albert Snyder over the head.

He did this without apparent emotion, lifting his arms and bringing them down like a woodchopper.

Mrs. Snyder averted her gaze during the demonstration and kept her head bowed.

This was in the first minutes of Gray's cross-examination by counsel for Mrs. Ruth Snyder, co-defendant in the crime.

Gray's cross-examination was started shortly after noon. His direct examination had lasted ten hours.

In his direct examination Gray told in an emotional voice of trying

Little Rock, Ark., May 5 (I.N.S.).—Armed troops patrolled the streets today to prevent a race riot following the lynching of one negro, the beating and threatened lynching of a second and the wounding of a white boy by mobs that took control of Little Rock.

John Carter, negro, was lynched and his body thrown on a funeral pyre in the negro section. A second negro was found armed and was severely beaten only to be saved by a white man who pleaded with the mob to let him put the man in jail.

SECRET JURY PROBE ON TWO MEDFORD SCHOOLS

An inquiry into Medford municipal affairs is under way by the Middlesex County Grand Jury.

Among the witnesses were Michael J. Dyer, a school-house architect; Thomas W. Duncan, a contractor, and Arthur Zanetti, treasurer of the Lynn Stone Company; J. Albert Reardon, conected with the Reardon Brothers, a Lynn heating and ventilating concern; Kenneth Kimball, a Medford Alderman, who is employed by R. D. Kimball Company; P. A. Sullivan, connected with a plumbing concern; Acting City Engineer W. M. Archbold, City Auditor A. A. Lucey, through whose department bills for the work on both schools went; Schoolhouse Building Commissioners Cuthbert H. Lowell, Christopher W. Conway, Michael Sullivan and William F. White.

District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell refused to say what action is contemplated.

For many weeks past there have been stories afloat in Medford that a probe was under way. It was said that secret agents of the district attorney's office were conducting the investigation, and these rumors were borne out by what transpired today.

MELLON'S 'CURT' DEBT NOTE STIRS BRITISH IRE

London, May 5 (A. P.)—Secretary of State Kellogg's brief reply to the British note on the war debts and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's new statement on the subject are given much front-page space in the afternoon newspapers. The Evening News uses the headline:

"Curt U. S. reply to British note. Britain's friendly Note repulsed. U. S. has no desire to debate chancellor's attack. Mr. Mellon unrepentant."

The Star also heads its dispatches: "Curt U. S. reply." The Evening Standard uses the caption: "War debts letter a 'domestic affair.'—Washington agency."

Britain's note to the United States was aimed primarily at her Continental debtors, for the purpose of removing "false impressions" created on the Continent by Secretary Mellon's letter to President Hibben of Princeton University.

This statement was made to the Associated Press by a responsible Downing street official. The government, he said, had no criticism ing to strangle Snyder with wire after Mrs. Snyder and he had beaten him unconscious and she had chloroformed him.

"But I couldn't do it," he said. "I was too shaky and drunk."

Although Gray was generally believed to have passed the climax of his testimony, the crowds at the trial today showed no abatement.

By 9:30 o'clock the courtroom was filled to overflowing and still the thrill-hungry spectators poured in. Most of the hundred odd chairs reserved for the press had been preempted when the reporters arrived and the glass-domed room resounded with argument and recrimination.

Court officers admitted their helplessness to cope with the situation. The crowd was so unruly that opening of court was delayed ten minutes.

Both Gray and Mrs. Snyder were pale but calm as they came into the crowded courtroom prepared to face another day of their great ordeal.

Dana Wallace, counsel for Mrs. Snyder, conducted Gray's cross-examination and jumped right to the hour of the murder. Q.—You say you had your glasses off at the time? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you take them off? A.—In Mrs. Snyder's mother's room.

Q.—How long did you take them off before hitting Snyder? A.—I don't remember.

Enacts Death Scene

Q.—Did you take them off having in mind you were about to use the sashweight? A.—No.

Q.—Why, then? A.—In case there should be a fight, I think.

Q.—You were so attuned to the situation that you made all preparations for conflict? A.—Not necessarily.

Q.—Show us how you struck those blows?

Gray here stood up on the stand and illustrated how he raised the sashweight and brought it down on Albert Snyder's head.

Q.—Why didn't you show any emotion while you showed us that? You cried last night in telling about it. Why don't you cry now in acting it out? Were your tears last night purely for effect? A.—No.

Wallace then asked concerning the plans for the murder.

Q.—You joined her because she hounded you and dominated you? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did this dominance begin? A.—It was gradual. About last May she had that power over me.

Q.—Why in reading your confession did you omit the statement: 'She was a woman of great charm?'

"Woman of Charms"

The State objected to the question and when Wallace observed that it was clean, Justice Scudder intervened.

"He might have thought so at first and have changed his mind since," Justice Scudder said, and the spectators burst into laughter.

Bailiffs banged and shouted for order and the judge glared angrily. The question went unanswered.

Objections were popping like exploding shells about Wallace. At one time even Edgar F. Hazelton, his associate in the defense of Mrs. Snyder, joining the chorus.

Wallace next turned to the friendship between H. J. Gray and Haddon Gray. The witness said the policy for $50,000 insurance he carries was not written by Haddon Gray.

The questions then dealt with the first insurance conversation between Gray and Mrs. Snyder. He told of advising her generally of the value of insurance.

Q.—Did she ever ask you if she would be able to insure her husband's life without his knowledge? A.—No, I know very little about insurance.

Q.—When did you first learn Mrs.

'CRISS-CROSS' AT FLOOD SHOW

All proceeds of the production, through the courtesy of the State management, will be turned over to the Metropolitan Chapter of the Red Cross to be sent to the flood victims. Tickets are going fast, but the more the merrier, and a packed house means just one drop in the bucket of the national relief fund being raised by the Red Cross.

Seats are a dollar each. Reservations will be held until 10 o'clock tomorrow night. No limit is set on the number sold to one person. Those who buy are not giving something for nothing. Look at the program.

Most of the star vaudeville performers now doing the two or three a day in town will do their stuff for the midnight show. They include dancers, singers, comedians and musicians. The music of the evening will be headlined by Tommy Christian's gang of syncopators.

From "The Ghost Train" the show will borrow a conductor or brakeman or two. "Yes, Yes, Yvette," will send Yvette, Donald Brian and one of the "yes men." "The Vagabond King" will send a flock of pretty courtiers and troubadours from his court at the Shubert. Charlie Winslinger will say his best "Oh, Please," when he arrives from the Tremont with Beatrice Lillie.

From start to finish the program for tomorrow night's benefit performance is a procession of headliners, all eager to do their bit to help the relief fund. One dollar a throw! Let's go! It's a giveaway at the price and an ace high takein.

Howell to Resign

Judd Like a Calm Judge, Says Margery Rex

By MARGERY REX

Queens County Courthouse, Long Island City, N. Y., May 5.—Henry Judd Gray has a slow, judicial manner today. You would think if you wandered into court and heard this grave, sonorous voice, not knowing the little salesman's status, that a judgment was being passed on some very sad wrong-doer.

Gray seems to have new strength today. Like someone recovering from a long energy-sapping illness, or like one cleansed by the surgery of truth from a deadly growth.

Margaret Gray, Judd's mother, is paler than usual today. How she spent last night can only be guessed at.

Judd's own simple, vivid description of his mental condition while on the train fleeing from the scene of Snyder's slaughter may be used to tell how his mother passed last night.

"I did not read. I could not. I did not sleep. I could not."

Margaret Gray's red eyes show she wept more than she slept. Wept in fear of her son's fate which he more than met half way with his truth-telling. Yet she must have thrilled with pride when he cast off all uncleanliness.

GRAY RECITES HIS ELEGY.

Gray's elegy is recited from the witness stand. Not "Gray's Elegy in a Country Churchyard," but "Gray's —Judd Gray's—elegy," began when he wandered into a country backyard in Queens Village.

"The curfew tolls the knell of parting day," and Judd tells a story that sounds like a deathknell to the passing of his own days.

Isabella Kallenbach Gray, Judd's deserting wife, who hides her chagrin in a little Connecticut village, should have come to gaze upon her husband yesterday.

She would have seen a hero-of-sorts. A man, who, through his own story, is slowly suiciding to save himself. The truth may kill his body —but his soul is already free.

The belief that one must lose his life in order to gain it was never more clearly shown than by "Judd Gray's own story."

GIRLS RAISE MONEY TO PAY OLYMPIC EXPENSES

In order t o pay their share of the expenses in the next Olympic competition, girl athletes in the Boston Swimming Association will hold a dance Friday night, May 13, at the Tent on Huntington avenue.

Proceeds will be turned over to the Olympic Association. The committee in charge is headed by Ben Levias, chairman of the committee on women's athletics in New England.

Among the girl athletes working for the success of the party are Ione Muir, Eleanor Churchill, national ball throwing champion; Katherine Mearles, Rena MacDonald, Evelyn Hurney, Mary Townsend, Marion Troop, Mildred Wiley, Mae Magill, Alice Morris, Edna Kelly, Corinne Dusey and others.

U. S. DEBT NOTE ROILS BRITISH

to make of the brief reply made to the note by the American Secretary of State.

The British note, made public last night, challenged the accuracy of statements made by Secretary Mellon in his letter to Dr. Hibben in which the secretary stated Great Britain's schedule of payments for her debtors called for "a substantial amount more than she will pay to us, so that her American payments will not constitute a drain upon her own economic resources."

The British government, the official said, had no criticism to make of the brief reply to the note issued by Frank B. Kellogg, American Secretary of State.

Great Britain had no desire to enter an American domestic controversy over the war debts question, it is stated here, but the issue was forced by what is still stoutly maintained in government circles to be Secretary Mellon's "misrepresentations."

These, it is asserted, were creating a grave situation on the Continent and could only be counteracted by a full statement of the British viewpoint. The note, it is believed, cannot escape the attention of Great Britain's continental debtors.

It is pointed out that the fact that the British government took no action regarding the Mellon-Hibben letter until now is evidence of Britain's desire not to be precipitate.

The British government, it is asserted, had a clear opportunity to expose Mr. Mellon's "mistakes" weeks ago, but the controversy was then regarded as purely domestic.

When, however, it became evident that the secretary's letter had created widespread opinion in Europe that Great Britain was not living up to the principles of the Balfour note, on which the British war debts policy is based, there was no choice but for Downing street to dispatch a note to Washington.

CONDITION OF LIVING DEAD BOY DISCOURAGING

Roanoke, Va., May 5 (A.P.).—Discouraging reports continued today on the condition of Walter L. Boothe, young farmer, kept alive in a hospital here by artificial respiration for more than two weeks since paralysis gripped his body from the neck down.

Boothe retained consciousness, however, and physicians said he was able to sleep occasionally and that his heart action was holding up.

It has become necessary to increase the speed of the flexion of his arms to induce breathing, the count now approximating 25 to the minute as against 20 a week ago.

Kellogg Said It to Great Britain in Just 90 Words

Great Britain in a 2,500 word note to the United States reproved Secretary Mellon for what it regards as an error in his letter to President Hibben of Princeton regarding debts. Britain denied it receives more from other nations than it pays the United States.

Secretary Kellogg in 90-word reply refused to enter diplomatic controversy, saying the issue was domestic.

Mellon claimed the British note upholds his principal point and referred to the obvious error in inadvertent omission of a few words.

THOUSANDS OF HOMELESS CROWD REFUGEE CAMPS

alluvial and swamp lands were covered. Vidalia and Ferriday, the section's principal towns, either already were entirely under water or were expected to be submerged within the next few hours.

A man was reported drowned near Winn Island, Richland parish, where twenty-four persons were marooned upon high ground. A swift current prevented boats from reaching em. Rayville also was reported in a precarious position, being threatened by the waters of the Boeuf River and by the overflow from Arkansas streams.

Five thousand persons had been made homeless in that section within twenty-four hours. Motorboats and skiffs were utilized by rescuers throughout the night in saving men, women and children from housetops and trees.

Further west and to the south, Rapides parish officials appealed for men and spades as many citizens struggled with the waters of Bayou Rapides. An attempt to cut the levees along that stream was believed forestalled with the arrival of armed men to patrol the embankments.

Refugees streaming into Delhi, located on a ridge in Richland Parish, filled the camp beyond capacity. Between five and eight thousand persons still were to be removed from the levees in the neighborhood of St. Joseph. A plea was made for boats. Barges also were asked to remove 4,000 head of cattle.

Meanwhile, the largest rescue fleet ever assembled on the river, composed of steam boats, coast guard cutters and other vessels, was moving along the river and nosing through the inundated lowlands, picking up refugees.

The fleet will follow the crest of the flood as it moves to the Gulf of Mexico.

Red Cross officials at Baton Rouge considered plans for Louisiana refugee camps as safe as they could make them. Officials conducted a survey of the territory two weeks before the flood reached that section and stations were located on high ground. The largest probably will be at Alexandria, where national guard and artillery camps will be used to accommodate 70,000 persons, 500 of whom already are there.

16,000 Refugees at Vicksburg Cared For

Vicksburg, Miss., May 5 (I.N.S.).—From north, south, east and west the broken haggard lines of homeless and hopeless continued today to converge upon historic Vicksburg.

More than 16,000 were in five camps about the city before noon and still the motley fleet which is Louisiana's salvation rushed back and forth across the Mississippi's inland sea to bring in yet more from the levees, the housetops and the trees.

The refugee registration at Red Cross headquarters is only a little short of the normal population of the city. Regular business for the most part goes by the board while shopkeepers, professional and business men, tradesmen and servants devote themselves to their places in the great relief machine which has sprung up in the city.

Housewives are busy with their tasks of providing clothing for the utterly destitute in the camps. Business men and tradesmen have taken over the matter of supplies and shipments, professional men are looking after sanitation and sickness in the camps.

COP SUSPENDED AFTER NEWTON AUTO CRASH

A secret investigation into an early morning automobile crash resulted in Chief Bernard F. Burke of the Newton police department suspending and bringing charges of neglect of duty and conduct unbecoming an officer against Patrolman William C. Haley, according to a statement issued by Mayor Edwin O. Childs today.

In his report to the Mayor, Chief Burke stated that Haley was a passenger in a machine driven by Carl Nelson of West Newton which crashed through a fence in Lewis terrace, Newtonville, early Tuesday morning. Another passenger, Arthur J. Little of High street, Waltham, is still confined to the Newton Hospital with serious injuries about the head.

According to the report, all three were injured, but Haley was taken to another hospital by a friend. He is charged with permitting Nelson to drive while under the influence of liquor, though he was off duty at the time of the accident.

Chief Burke was called from his bed and on being informed of the crash immediately started an investigation. Soon after his arrival at the scene the registration plates were removed from the wrecked car, but later they were replaced.

Visits of George B. Doane, wealthy Brookline yachtsman, and Mrs. Florence Densmore of Brookline to the Boston Yacht Club in cool Fall days when yachts generally had been drawn up, were testified to in Norfolk Probate Court today by a Boston woman who declared she saw many of them.

She was Mrs. Harriet E. Whitmore of Columbia road, South Boston, which is opposite the yacht club, and she was testifying in the separate support suit of Mrs. Maud A. Doane against the yachtsman.

Mrs. Doane alleges indiscretions of Doane and Mrs. Densmore, wife of Doane's friend from boyhood. The yachtsman's wife also has pending a suit for divorce and a $100,000 alienation of affections suit, the latter against Mrs. Densmore.

Mrs. Whitmore has a lot of windows in her house, some facing on Columbia road and some on O street. She has no windows facing East Seventh street, but she testified she saw Doane's car parked in that street also.

SEEKS PARDON FOR ENWRIGHT

A pardon for her husband who is serving an eight months' sentence in Charles Street Jail was asked of Governor Fuller today by Mrs. Frederick W. Enwright.

Accompanying Mrs. Enwright in her visit to the chief executive was her daughter. Both refused to make any comment. The Governor took the request under advisement.

Enwright was found guilty of libelling former Mayor Curley in a cartoon printed in the now defunct Boston Telegraph.

CROWDS STORM COURT AS JUDD GRAY FACES GRILLING ON STAND

Snyder was having trouble with her husband? A.—July, 1925.

Suddenly Wallace jumped his questions back to the murder scene. "Do you mean to say," he shouted, "that you did not tie the wire about Albert Snyder's neck?"

"I did not tie that wire," Gray replied.

The questioning then dealt again with the events immediately after the murder.

Q.—Did you touch the body? A.—Yes. She wanted to know if he was dead I touched his hand and it was cold. I told her I thought he was dead. She was standing beside me.

Gave Wire to Ruth

Q.—Any wire around his neck then? A.—I don't know. The blankets covered the upper part of his body.

Q.—You had had possession of the wire? A.—Yes. I gave it to her on March 7 when I went to her home at night.

Q.—You didn't see her after that until the night of the murder? A.—No. I'm quite positive.

Q.—Quite positive? You know, don't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Are you trying to evade these answers? A.—No.

Vigorous objection was made here by Gray's counsel to the method of examination but counsel for Gray was overruled.

Q.—When did you first see the pistol? A.—After the murder when Mrs. Snyder gave it to me.

Q.—And you pressed it into Snyder's hand? A.—Yes.

Q.—To get his fingerprints on it? A.—I don't know what my thought was, I was working automatically.

Q.—You were drunk? A.—Yes.

Acted "Automatically"

Wallace then recalled numerous details of Gray's actions after the murder and asked if he thought those acts were the unreasoning acts of drunkenness. Gray insisted that all his actions at that time were purely automatic.

"Automatic?" Wallace thundered. "Were you so accustomed to committing murders that covering up your trail was an automatic action?"

"I had never done anything like that before," said Gray.

Q.—And you didn't know where the pistol was before the murder? A.—No.

Q.—You knew Snyder had one? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you had no fear for your own safety? You didn't find out from Mrs. Snyder whether the pistol might be where Snyder could use it against you? A.—No.

Gray said that he thought the plan to simulate a robbery to cover their part in the murder was first discussed on March 7.

Q.—That was the day you got the wire? A.—Yes, at my office. She asked me to get some rope to bind her husband and I got the wire instead.

At this point noon recess was declared. After recess Atty. Wallace continued the cross-examination.

Gray replied "I don't know" to several questions about recent years.

Q.—Has your memory recently deserted you? A.—I had been drinking on the occasions you ask about.

Q.—Hadn't you been drinking constantly on that honeymoon trip up-State and yet you could tell your own lawyer the most minute happenings?

Justice Scudder sustained an objection and the questioning was changed.

Ruth Shudders as Gray Plays 'Killer' in Court

NEW YORK, May 5.—The most dramatic moment of the Snyder trial occurred today when Henry Judd Gray gripped the sashweight with which he killed Albert Snyder and demonstrated the manner in which he did it.

Removing his glasses, then hesitating a moment, Gray coolly reached for the murder weapon. It weighs six pounds. He required the use of both hands to take it from Dan Wallace, Mrs. Snyder's lawyer.

At the lawyer's bidding he next took the weapon, stood in his place on the witness stand and waved the weight twice, bringing it down in imitation of the manner in which he killed the husband of the woman accused with him of the murder.

As he staged the act, Ruth Snyder cringed in her chair.

Judge Glares at Doors

The testimony here was almost drowned in the angry shouts of a crowd in the corridor tussling with each other and court officers to gain entrances to the already overfilled courtroom. Justice Scudder glared at the doors.

Q.—When did you and Mrs. Snyder first plan jointly to murder her husband? A.—In the latter part of February or in the first part of March.

Q.—You planned the burglary story at that time? A.—Yes.

Wallace then read from the Gray confession an assertion that the burglary was first decided on in the cellar after the murder.

Gray replied that the details were decided on in the cellar but the main plan had been settled on before.

Wallace next asked why Gray cut the murder implements for Mrs. Snyder

"Because she asked me," Gray replied.

Q.—Oh, you didn't take them out there to do the murder yourself? A.—No.

Q.—But you know what she wanted them for? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you go at all then? A.—She asked me to.

Q.—You mean she had a strange influence over you? A.—Yes, that and liquor were the reasons.

Examination was then concentrated on the night of the murder. It was brought out that the suggestion to tie Mrs. Snyder to simulate a burglary originated with Gray.

Q.—Who suggested tying the victim? A.—I don't recall. But I remember her asking me to get some rope for that purpose.

Q.—But you got wire instead? A.—Yes.

Q.—In your office? A.—Yes.

Ruth There in "Spirit"

Q.—Was Mrs. Snyder standing over you dominating you then? A.—Not in person.

Q.—You mean she was there in spirit? A.—Possibly.

Suddenly Wallace veered in his questioning and asked if Gray knew that while he had been testifying under direct examination, Haddon Gray, on the other side of the courtroom door, had known every word he said.

Q.—But you didn't do the murder that night of March 7, did you? A.—No.

Q.—So you did overcome that magnetic power, didn't you? The spell wasn't complete, was it? A.—I made up my mind not to do such a thing.

Q.—You made up your mind then to having nothing more to do with the murder. A.—I did.

Q.—But you didn't throw away the implements? A.—No.

Wanted to Hire "Killer"

Q.—You thought you might need them later. A.—Either I or a third person.

Q.—Third person? Was there a third person in this? A.—She had asked me to hire a gunman to do the thing.

Q.—And you and she were going to help the gunman? A.—Not I.

Q.—You were going to run away? A.—I was going on a business trip.

Wallace made much of an Italian newspaper found in the Snyder home after the murder.

He pointed out that Gray, in his written confession had said he and Mrs. Snyder had decided to say that a negro committed the burglary.

Q.—Why did you pick up an Italian newspaper? To prove that a colored man did the burglary? A.—No I saw the newspaper in the street and picked it up and later told Mrs. Snyder we would use it for burglary evidence and would say the robbers were foreigners.

One question by Wallace that began: "Will you tell us as nearly as the whiskey-crazed condition of your mind permits," brought Wallace a severe reprimand from the court.

Wallace then sought to gain an admission from Gray that if Mrs. Snyder could not carry through the murder that he intended to do it alone. Gray calmly insisted that he never intended to take part in the actual killing.

Gray Is Near Tears

Wallace then quoted from the Gray confession: "It was my idea, just to chloroform him. The sashweight came as an after thought."

"Does not that mean that you intended to do the murder alone with chloroform?" Wallace asked.

"No, that is not true," said Gray.

Counsel for Gray objected, and after the confession had been referred to by counsel for all sides, the question was withdrawn by Wallace, who than Dean Sterling City about his church affiliations.

SNYDER SLAYER ENACTS 'DEATH SCENE' BEFORE JURORS IN COURT

Gray almost lost control of himself when Wallace asked if he didn't have a daughter about the age of Mrs. Snyder's daughter.

Immediately District Attorney Newcombe was on his feet protesting and Justice Scudder sustained him.

Wallace amended his question to ask if Gray knew anyone was reading his testimony on the automatic telegraph machine in the room where the newspaper wires are.

He replied that he did not know this.

Q.—You went to Queens Village the night of March 1 intending to go through with this murder? A.—No.

Q.—But intending to try to go through with it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you go out there? You weren't forced were you? It wasn't fear, was it? A.—I think I'd call it magnetism.

Q.—Oh, and this magnetic power was so strong you could not resist it? A.—I could not resist it.

Immediately after court opened today Gray resumed the witness chair for his direct examination and Mrs. Snyder went to her seat at the defense counsel table. Gray at once took up his story of the killing of Snyder.

After Snyder was murdered, Gray said, he put on one of the dead man's shirts, which Mrs. Snyder gave him, and they then went downstairs where they sat in the living room.

This testimony was a repetition of the last of yesterday's narrative and counsel for Mrs. Snyder objected. Justice Scudder said Gray might double back on his story if he had additional details.

Gray continued to tell of disposal in the furnace of bloodstained clothing and of hiding the sashweight.

"Then we went upstairs," he said, "and into the room where Snyder lay. I think it was at this time I put the revolver on his bed.

"She asked me if he was dead and I said I did not think so. She asked me to hold her twist wire around his neck. I tried, but I was so shaky and so drunk that I couldn't do it.

"I started mussing things up to make it seem there had been a burglary. She asked me if I would hit her over the head to help the burglary story, but I said I could not.

"I did tie her up, however, and took two drinks and then left by the side door."

Gray then told of taking a bus to Jamaica from Queens Village where the Snyders lived. From Jamaica he went by taxi to Manhattan, where he had breakfast in the Grand Central terminal and then took the 8:45 A. M. train for Syracuse.

"I tried to read on the train and could not," he said. "I tried to sleep and could not."

Tells About His Alibi

Samuel Miller, Gray's counsel, who was conducting the direct examination of his client, asked at this point if Gray had worn any disguise or changed his appearance in any way. Gray said he had not.

Gray then told of throwing from the train a brief case which contained poisons Mrs. Snyder gave him after the killing.

"I was very dazed when I got to Syracuse," he said. "I went directly to my room in the Onondaga Hotel."

He was then asked to recount his actions in Syracuse the previous day, before leaving for Queens Village.

"I got up about 7 o'clock," he said, "and got a shoe shine. After breakfast I did some errands and then went to the office of my friend, Haddon Gray, and made an appointment for lunch. I called on a customer then, had two or three drinks and Haddon met me about 1 o'clock.

Gray Got "Quite Drunk"

"We had lunch and I told him I had an engagement with Mommie in Albany and asked if he would do me a favor by mussing up my bed and mailing some letters and hanging out the 'Don't Disturb' sign.

"He said he would and went away. I had some more drinks. Took my briefcase, stopped at a place to get some drinks and went to the station. I had dinner on the train and arrived in New York about 10 o'clock."

Miller next asked Gray to pick up his narrative at the point where he got back to Syracuse after his trip to Queens Village.

"I took a bath at the hotel and changed my clothes," Gray testified, "and called Haddon Gray. He was out, but his wife said she would have him call.

"Oh, when I got to my room I found a note saying something like: 'Perfect. Call when ready.'"

The note was then produced and identified.

"Haddon called me about 5:30," Gray continued, "and asked me to dinner. I asked him to come down to get me as I was in trouble and wanted to see him personally.

"He came down with another man. I told them I'd got in a mixup and had got some blood on my clothes. I gave them a black suitcase, the clothing, a picture and a brief case.

"We took all this to the gentleman's office and then went to Haddon's house where we had something to drink. I had supper there and stayed till about 11 o'clock.

"Then I called on a friend at the Syracuse Hotel and got quite drunk. I went to my own hotel then and was still up when detectives came and got me.

"I went to police headquarters and after some time was taken to a cell. Later I was taken upstairs and questioned by two men. That was eight of nine in the morning.

"I asked if I could communicate with Haddon Gray and they said no. After long questioning I was asked to make a statement as to my whereabouts on the day I had been in New York. Detectives told me my finger-prints were on Snyder's pillow case.

Weeps on the Stand

"I asked to see a lawyer, and they said no."

Gray remained perfectly calm as he spoke and Mrs. Snyder sat calmly with her chin in her hands boldly staring at him.

As he told of being taken by Syracuse police to the station, however, and of the crowds that surged around him with the booming of flashlights, his eyes grew misty and he wiped a tear from his cheek.

"In the train," he said, suddenly beginning to weep, "they told me I'd better come across; that they'd like to treat me like a gentleman, but there were ways to make me talk if they had to be used.

"They showed me a newspaper with a headline that said Mrs. Snyder had confessed.

"First one questioned me and then another. Finally I was so confused I told them I had been in Queens Village that night. I don't remember whether I told them the whole story at that time or not."

He said he was taken to the Queens County district attorney's office where he was told to tell his story in his own words. This was Monday and he said he had no sleep since Friday night.

"Next he told of his arraignment and his appearance at the police "line up," where he had to stand on a platform while dozens of masked detectives looked him over.

Miller frequently asked Gray if he had his glasses on at various times during these days. State witnesses have previously testified to remembering him by his horn-rimmed glasses.

Gray was then asked to tell a conversation with Mrs. Snyder before the killing.

"She had read about the divorce mill at Elkton, Maryland," he said, "and suggested we elope down there, get divorced and then marry.

"I told her the idea was ridiculous and she kidded me about it. She brought it up several times later and once I think I agreed to go. But I was so intoxicated, I could not."

Gray then doubled back in his narrative to tell of Mrs. Snyder having telephone bills and mail delivered to her personally so that her husband would not become suspicious.

Gray's confession was then produced and he read it, omitting such parts as he asserted were untrue.

Ruth Listens Calmly

He omitted little as he read and that little were details of no importance. His reading of the confession sounded like a skeletonized form of his testimony on the stand yesterday.

As he came in his reading to the recountal of the actual killing, he began to cry again and his voice choked with emotion. Mrs. Snyder seemed to have herself in perfect control and listened calmly.

One point in the confession which Gray read as truth but which he did not include in his spoken story on the stand, dealt with a threat made by Mrs. Snyder.

It was alleged in the confession that Mrs. Snyder threatened Gray that if he did not aid her in killing her husband, she would disclose to Mrs. Gray their secret relations.

This statement Gray read as being true in a loud clear voice.

Atty. Miller then rested in his direct examination.

Schneider, who is being cared for at the home of a sister in Valley Stream, L. I., fainted in court as Gray told of beating Snyder's inert form with a sash weight.

RAPS BIGELOW FOR VIEWS ON MAD DOGS

Commissioner of Public Health Dr. George H. Bigelow is charged with unsportsmanlike conduct in a broadside fired today by F. N. LeBaron, who takes exception to the commissioner's views on the inoculation of dogs against rabies.

It was LeBaron who previously disclosed that a Quincy man was willing to let himself be bitten, if necessary, to prove that most dogs suspected of having rabies are harmless.

"All the research work offered by Dr. Bigelow at my meeting with him was work done by two Japanese and he did not know whether or not they did the work for any public institution or the government or purely on a commercial basis," declared LeBaron.

"I showed him the United States governmental report wherein the results obtained were absolutely contrary to the claims of the two Japanese.

"Another bit of research work was done by the commissioner himself in Hilton. Two hundred dogs were vaccinated, but Dr. Bigelow admitted he had not taken the previous history if any so vaccinated, yet he called it research work.

"I find he sent out post cards to the owners later. Many reported sick dogs from the effects of the vaccine and four had died. The report says that the death of one dog might have been caused by eating old potatoes. I wonder what would have been the result if he had eaten mashed brown or lyonnaise potatoes.

"Dr. Bigelow states there has been a tremendous increase of rabies among dogs in Massachusetts during the past eight years. I find that the United States government reports a tremendous increase in the use of rabies vaccine. What is the answer?

"I seek an opportunity to be heard by a disinterested body and challenge Dr. Bigelow to appear with me before the Governor and his Council to discuss the question of compulsory vaccination of our dogs."

Boy, 8, Afraid to Be Late, Stays Out All Night

"I chased a dog to Lynn and back and was afraid to come in the house late for supper," was the explanation eight-year-old Wilbur Wilkins of Beach street, Revere, gave to his mother today for his absence last night.

While police prepared to drag the marshes after a futile all-night search for the youngster, he surprised his frantic mother before noon by walking into the kitchen and telling none the worse for his experience.

He said he had passed the night on a mattress in an old building near his home.

ond floor of the yacht club would be pulled down after the couple entered the club, Mrs. Whitmore testified, and would remain down about an hour. Then the couple would emerge, cross Columbia road, get into the car and drive away.

Mrs. Whitmore was very much put out about Doane's parking his car under her dining room window, she testified. Not that it interrupted her meals, but she explained that she didn't want the neighbors to believe that the couple were visiting her house, even if they were in plain sight while crossing two roads and a middle parkway in reaching the club.

STARED AT HIM.

As early as the second time the man parked his car there and got out with Mrs. Densmore, the South Boston woman stood in the window and just stared and stared at him, to show the man that she was displeased, she said.

Finally Doane's wife happened to be in the house when Doane and Mrs. Densmore drove up, parked and crossed to the yacht club, Mrs. Whitmore said. Mrs. Doane told Mrs. Whitmore the man was Doane and the woman Mrs. Densmore.

When the case was called today Henry W. Packer, chief counsel for Mrs. Doane, sought a continuance on the ground that Mrs. Densmore had been reported ill and unable then to appear in court.

Thomas F. McAnarney, counsel for Doane, objected, however, and accused the plaintiff side of "attempting to start on a fishing expedition to bolster up its own case before putting on its witnesses."

Judge McCoole ordered the case to proceed and Densmore, a natty and prosperous appearing man of about fifty years, with iron gray hair, took the stand for questioning by Attorney Packer.

Densmore testified that he lives in Hyslop road with his wife, whom he married in June, 1914. They have three children. He has known Doane since boyhood and has been friendly with him.

During several Summers he and his wife went on cruises on Doane's yacht, the Sea Lure, Densmore testified, and Doane was a frequent visitor to the Densmore home.

Q.—When was the last time you were on a cruise? A.—October, 1925, I think.

Q.—When you saw Mr. Doane at Onset in 1923, did you introduce your wife to him? A.—I did.

Q.—Was Mrs. Densmore present on that occasion? A.—I don't recollect.

Q.—Were you and your wife present in the Summer of 1922 when Mr. Doane left on a cruise? A.—I don't recollect.

Q.—Did you start to say that Mrs. Densmore and Mrs. Doane were present? A.—I think they were.

HAD BEEN DRINKING.

Q.—Do you recall in the Fall of 1923 you attended a party at the Doanes when you were taken ill? A.—I do.

Q.—Had you been drinking? A.—I think I had.

Q.—Did you receive gifts from Mr. Doane?

When Densmore broke into laughter at the question, Judge McCoole admonished him.

"I will have to warn you on mirth," said the Court. "I don't care for any of it."

Q.—Did you and Mrs. Densmore go on cruises with Mr. Doane on the Sea Lure? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Mrs. Doane present? A.—I think she was.

Q.—Have you any recollection of Mr. Doane's leaving for a cruise to Bermuda in 1923? A.—I think I have.

Densmore testified that he and his wife went on one two-day cruise with Doane to Martha's Vineyard, when Mrs. Doane was not present.

Q.—On that cruise did you visit Rum Row. A.—Where is that?

Q.—Did you visit any Rum Row on that cruise?

Objection sustained.

Q.—During 1922 and 1923, were there times when Mr. Densmore called alone on you and your wife? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were his visits without his wife more frequent than with her? A.—They always were more frequent.

Q.—During all these years, did you observe what your wife's attitude was toward Mr. Doane? A.—I didn't observe anything. I think my wife's attitude toward Mr. Doane was what it would be toward any of her friends.

a well known Brookline decorator. He started a hunt.

Robart spotted the open door of Winslow's room, which was unusual.

Winslow's door slammed closed. Instantly came young Winslow's eager voice:

"He's here, back of the door, Dad."

The father whirled open the door, heard a voice call, "Stick 'em up!" ignored the order, leaped upon the stranger—and rolled with him all over the floor while Winslow in his pajamas, danced excitedly around them, calling encouragement to his parent.

Robart searched his quarry but found no weapon. The family went back to bed again after the police had collected "Key." He was charged with breaking and entering in the night time.

NUNGESSER TO DELAY HOP OVER SEA

Le Bourget, France, May 5 (A.P.).—Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Francis Coli decided this afternoon to defer their departure from Villa Coublay for the flying field at Le Bourget until tomorrow or later. The squad of mechanics who had been waiting here to fuel the Nungesser plane for the projected Paris-to-New York flight was sent home for the night.

Captain Nungesser had considered flying the plane here from Villacoublay this afternoon, taking aboard the great quantities of fuel and oil necessary for the trans-Atlantic hop and getting away at dawn tomorrow.

Bellanca Plane May Be Delayed in Take-Off

Mineola, N. Y., May 5 (A.P.).—Lloyd W. Bertaud, navigator and co-pilot of the Bellanca monoplane, today said that it was impossible to say because of minor delays just when he and Clarence Chamberlin would begin their trans-atlantic flight to Paris.

Contrary to some reports, he said that Saturday had not been chosen as the day for a take-off.

indiscriminately. Found hiding in a tree, Carter confessed to the mob he had attacked Mrs. B. E. Stewart and her daughter as they drove into Little Rock.

Mrs. Stewart was taken from the hospital by the mob, identified the negro positively, and stood thirty feet away and watched him hanged to a tree and riddled with bullets.

The negro's body was tied behind an automobile and dragged through the main section of the city and then through the negro district. The automobile was followed by a mob of more than a thousand men.

In the heart of the negro section, the body was placed on a bonfire and burned to a crisp. Negroes fled as the mobs marched through the streets for hours.

Governor Martineau called out troops and these patrol the streets today.

U. S. ATTORNEY AIDS AGENT IN PISTOL CASE

Barro Vacarro of Revere, a Federal narcotic agent, was arraigned in Malden court today on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

The charge was preferred by Daniel Gerardi of Village street, South End, who was shot in the heel during a Federal drug raid in Medford last week. Gerardi was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital following the shooting, and for more than 12 hours Federal authorities maintained an air of secrecy about the shooting.

Assistant United States District Attorney John T. Spaulding appeared in court today to represent Vacarro. He announced he would endeavor to have the action transferred to the United States courts. Inasmuch as it directly concerned a federal employe who was performing his duty when Gerardi was shot.

Attorney William H. ... Lewis appeared as counsel for Gerardi. The attorneys, after considerable debate, agreed on a continuance and the Federal agent was admitted to $200 personal bail for hearing next week.

LIVES OF TWO SAVED BY DOG

Providence, May 5—A collie dog today saved the lives of his master and a friend when flames destroyed the Whitehouse Country Club at Warwick.

Frank Del Rio, who was caretaker of the clubhouse, is the owner of the dog. Last night his friend, Peter Carlo, decided to spend the night with him. Early today Del Rio was awakened by his dog leaping on his bed and tearing at the covers. Del Rio awakened to find the southern wing of the building in flames. He awakened his friend and the two fled from the building.

Warwick has only a volunteer fire department and is without a water supply. The loss was $10,000.

CO-ED FAKED ATTACKS TO TEST 'FEARS' OF MATES

Chicago, May 5 (A.P.)—Miss Ruth Rubin, eighteen, of Bismarck, N. D., has told Evanston police that her story of twice being attacked in her room at a girls' boarding house at Northwestern University was a lie perpetrated to get first hand information on the "psychological effects of fear."

A dozen or more co-eds were her laboratory subjects, and she told police that her test was so successful that her roommate became hysterical and swore she witnessed the attack, while the owner of the boarding house told of seeing a marauder in the corridor.

The effect of the girl's stories of the two attacks was that the co-eds living at the boarding house were seized with fear so great that on at least one night they slept in two adjoining rooms with the door between left open.

COURT CRITICS SCORED BY FOSDICK

Speaking before 100 Knights of Columbus at the monthly luncheon at the Hotel Bellevue today, Judge Frederick W. Fosdick rapped critics of the courts.

"I am certain no judge would enter a mercantile establishment, church or school and attempt to tell the people in charge how to run it," he said. "We like to call the play as we see it. We are only human and may be mistaken, but we are not dishonest."

The judge was introduced by State Deputy Edmund J. Brandon. The judge began his rap at critics by saying, "We seem to be in an age when the world has either a hammer or a bouquet ready all the time. Sometimes we get the bouquets, but more ofte we are laid cold.

"Justice cannot be measured by a yard stick. Day after day we are at our business and I think we know more about it than the people outside."

PRESIDENT OF FINNS STRICKEN

Fitchburg, May 5.—The Finnish newspaper Raivaaja received word today from the Finnish Consul at New York, A. Aitio, that Lauri Relander, President of Finland, is seriously ill and has turned over affairs of the government to Vaino Tanner, Prime Minister and Secretary of State.

Tanner is a leader in the Social-Democrat group. He visited this country several times and was welcomed in Fitchburg, Lowell and other cities.

THIEF, NOT MEAN ENOUGH TO ROB PUPILS, GETS $20

Thieves ripped the children's savings coin box off the wall at the Francis Parkman School, West Roxbury, but balked at stealing the pennies and silver it contained. Instead they took about $20 that the principal, Arthur Stanley, kept in his office desk for emergency.

MEN SHARE IN MOVIE AWARDS

While names of the winners in The Boston Evening American's recent "Who's Who in the Movies" competition will not be known before Saturday, the judges have permitted it to become known that for the first time, in a "movie" contest, the men of the Boston Evening American family have been quite as successful as their sisters.

Results will be announced in Saturday's paper. It is suggested that all who took part in the competition place an advance order for the Boston Evening American of that day with their regular newsdealers.

The leader who finished first in the competition will enjoy a 24-day cruise of the Caribbean, with the privilege of inviting a friend to accompany him, all without expense. Second prize will be a Ford sedan, of the latest make.

Other prizes include a Browning-Drake radio set, a Gray Line motor tour of the Maine beaches and the White Mountains, and season passes to the Metropolitan, Loew's State Theatre and Loew's Orpheum Theatre.

BETTER THAN "CHICKIE"

Elenore Meherin has written a new serial for Boston American readers,

"SHACKLED SOULS,"

A fearless revelation of a beautiful woman's innermost emotions. Begins next Monday in the American.

SAYS EMOTIONAL SHOCK IS CAUSE OF DIABETES

Atlantic City, N. J., May 5 (A.P.).—Dr. Charles P. Emerson of Indianapolis told the convention of the Association of American Physicians here, that organic ailments will result from a profound emotional shock.

Dr. Emerson said a toxic condition of the thyroid gland is often caused by an emotional outburst, resulting in goitre and then in diabetes. Pointing out that the Jewish race had a higher rate of diabetes than any other people, Dr. Emerson explained that the Jewish people had become emotional as a race through persecution and as a result were more susceptible to shocks, which might eventually result in goitre.

The lecturership of the association was awarded to Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute for his work in medical research.

Remarkable results through the use of myrtillin, a new supplementary drug to insulin in the treatment of diabetes, were described by Dr. S. M. Allen, director of the Psychiatric Institute, Morristown, N. J.

Dr. Allen explained that myrtillin has an advantage over insulin in that it is taken orally. Myrtillin is made from blueberry leaves.

SEVERAL HUNDRED HUB ROTARIANS READY TO SAIL

GRABS GIRL AS DEATH CALLS

Quick thinking on the part of Arthur V. Drohan of Quincy today saved the life of Kathryn H. Beesley when she slipped as she was boarding a moving train at the West Quincy railroad station.

She fell between the cars, but managed to hold to the handrail until Drohan, who had started running when he saw her slip, pulled her to safety.

She was treated for lacerations when taken home.

$1,008 for Flood Fund

Answering Mayor Nichols' appeal for funds for the flood sufferers in the Mississippi valley, fifty-three lessees of the Faneuil Hall Market turned over to him today $1,008.

CLOUDY CHILL QUITS FRIDAY

The current cool spell hereabout, which shrank the mercury to a minimum mark of 42 degrees above zero in the night, is officially predicted to give way tomorrow to a slowly rising temperature.

A storm area in Quebec and a similar disturbance off the coast of Connecticut gave indications early today of beclouding Greater Boston skies for at least 24 hours. Forecast for Boston and vicinity:

Partly cloudy tonight and Friday, with slowly rising temperature Friday; moderate shifting winds, probably becoming westerly Friday.

Better Mackerel Prices

Disappointed mackerel fishermen saw a brighter light today at the fish pier when wholesalers quoted 4½ to 5 cents per pound for their product, a cent more than yesterday. Receipts totalled 205,000 lbs.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY EVENTS

Tried and True Committee at Work for Chestnut Hill Horse Show at Longwood

THE IDENTICAL COMMITTEE THAT GUIDED DESTINIES for last season's Chestnut Hill Horse Show is on duty once more for the coming May 30th affair, and already is rounding into shape this interesting show that is a yearly standby of first importance. Reading alphabetically, such tried and true horsemen as Andrew Adie, Prescott Bigelow, Clarke T. Baldwin, Elmer Jared Bliss, George Frost, Chester A. Howe, Louis K. Liggett, W. Eugene McGregor, Leverett Saltonstall, Edwin Sibley Webster (both Senior and Junior), A. Winsor Weld and George S. West appear on the list, with Mr. Howe the directing head.

TIME WAS, A SCORE OR SO YEARS AGO, WHEN THE CHESTnut Hill show was a small and neighborly affair of say a half dozen exhibitors come together in friendly competition. It was the inspiration of a half dozen Chestnut Hill families having a mutual love of fine horseflesh. From those beginnings it has grown to be an all day affair, with some 22 classes and various trophies. And all just as friendly and neighborly now as in the old days, but with keener competition and resultantly greater honor to the winners.

BUGLES BLOW FOR THE FIRST CLASS ON MAY 30TH AT about half past nine in the morning, and before the last hunt team has gone over the jumps the sun will be well down in the West. The Longwood Cricket Club's greensward provides an attractive Show setting, and there will be the usual parking of smart motors about the ring. The "Nora Saltonstall," the "Montgomery Rollins," "Francis W. Lee" and the "Richard M. Saltonstall" cups will be in competition, and this year there's a new trophy, the Metropolitan Driving Club Cup in the Touch and Go class, No. 26 on the list.

VASTLY INTERESTING TO EVERYONE, PARENTS ESPECIALLY, are the children's classes for young people all the way up to sixteen years. This brings out the youthful scions of the George S. West, the Rudolph Weld, the Hinkley Welch, the Reginald Bird, the A. Nicholas Reggio, the Allan Forbes, the Prescott Bigelow and ever so many other families. The young fry ride like small centaurs, no horse is too tall nor too spirited for these small enthusiasts.

BERMUDA LILIES HEAVILY FRAGRANT AND A BEVY OF attendants in the crispest and freshest of taffeta frocks surrounded a bright-eyed bride of yesterday. She was Miss Eloise Singleton, daughter of the Frederick A. Singletons of Brookline, and exchanged her marriage troth at four in the afternoon with Sumner Bartlett Andrew. The creme ivory satin of the simply designed wedding gown was vastly becoming to a bride of her dark haired petite type. There was a suggestion of rose lace about the gown's yoke, and ripples of the same gauzy stuff on the square ended train. Her veil was a single weight of tulle banded low on the forehead.

THE ATTENDANTS' FROCKS, OF TAFFETA, SHADED FROM light to dark, in soft rose, sky blue, apricot and daffodil colors. Their hats were wide black affairs with clustered flowers; their shoes of black satin had rhinestone buttons, and their bouquets were loosely gathered Spring flowers repeating the tones of the frocks. The little flower girl, Sybil Crary, wore a pale pink frock and carried a formal nosegay. Miss Betty Newall was honor maid, and the others to attend the bride were Miss Eleanor Cogg, Miss Henrietta Hall, Miss Ruth Adams, Mrs. Charles P. White and Mrs. Robert C. Fitch.

AFTER THE CHURCH CEREMONIAL, IN THE FIRST PARISH (Unitarian) Church in Brookline, the large company of guests went over to the Country Club for the reception. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Clapp Andrew of Marlboro street and Annisquam. The bride's parents make their Summer home down on Eastern Point, Gloucester. Next Autumn the young people will set up their household on Beacon Hill, in Myrtle street.

BROOKLINE CHURCH BRIDE
Mrs. Sumner Bartlett Andrew (Eloise Singleton), whose marriage took place in the First Parish (Unitarian) Church at Brookline.

OFF TO PARIS ON THE Mauretania, with a retinue of servants, go M. Serge Koussevitsky and Madame Koussevitsky, on the first lap of their usual European Summer travels. In Boston the words "Koussevitsky" and "Symphony" have come to be synonymous, so closely are the dynamic conductor and the famous Boston orchestra associated in musical Boston minds. The Koussevitskys go back to Europe each Summer just as do so many of the Symphony members. After Paris, I believe they move on to Central Europe for a prolonged stay and to renew old associations.

SATEEN THAT LOOKS FOR all the world like its more expensive sister, "satin," goes into the making of the costume Miss Sylvia Weld, daughter of the Rudolph Welds, will wear to the Cotton Ball on May 13 at the Hotel Statler. It is of the snug basque, swirling skirt variety, a modified ballet costume, extremely becoming to its girlish wearer. She is one of the prospective debutantes whose appearance at the Cotton Ball will give that large and important affair a certain distinction all its own. Her parents are formally presenting her in the Autumn.

PAYS NO HEED TO THREAT.

Governor Fuller paid no heed to the threatening letter which was on a good quality of white ruled paper, evidently a page torn from a writing tablet. Governor Fuller's attention was called to the threat by Judge Webster Thayer, before whom Sacco and Vanzetti were tried and convicted, and to Chief Justice [illegible] reference to the message to the Governor.

The words of the threat were printed in hard, neatly cut letters, the characteristics of typewriter or [illegible] of hand-painted signs. It was stamped in the Chicago post office Tuesday night and bore the top of the letter A which was erroneously put down as Mich.

The author of the threat warned Governor Fuller that Judge Thayer and Vanzetti were not signed to Sacco and Vanzetti's guilt, the elements of which [illegible] was present. Also denied the truth of Fuller's [illegible]

Truth of Sacco Affidavit About Judge Flatly Denied

Worcester, May 5 (A.P.)—Leaving Case of the Case Wash Company today [illegible] denied the truth of an affidavit made by Robert M. C. Bencher, dramatic editor of Life, in which [illegible] that Case and Vanzetti had been [illegible] Judge Webster Thayer [illegible] Judge Thayer and Vanzetti and made other prejudicial statements concerning the two men. "Justice Plea" Points by Sacco, Vanzetti

Striking passages in the plea of Sacco and Vanzetti, [illegible] follows:

"We are asking not for mercy but for justice."

"We had nothing whatever to do with the South Braintree crime."

"Our trial was unfair, unworthy of even handed justice which your race and your country profess to respect."

"Further facts which cannot be explained away were the suppression by the district attorney of the testimony of important eye-witnesses."

"From the very beginning the judge sifted up the political, social, religious and economic hatred of the jurors and their bare and antagonistic against us."

"It seems that if a radical does not testify, this is enough to convict him, and if he does testify, his radicalism will convict him anyway."

"We are anarchists, believers in anarchy, which is a philosophy that like all the philosophies aims to human progress and happiness."

"We can die but once and the pang of death will be but momentary, but the facts which show injustice cannot be odds-rated."

[illegible] "Judge Thayer asked me how I thought the trial was going. I told him that I had not yet heard sufficient evidence to convince me the defendants were guilty. He expressed dissatisfaction with this statement b words, gestures, tone of voice and manner. He said that after hearing both arguments and his charge I would feel differently."—Mrs. Lois B. Manton.

"I know that Judge Thayer was not an impartial judge in this case, from my personal experience with him outside the courtroom during the trial."—George U. Crocker.

THE BEST ENGINEERS in the United States, including the experts of the army, men such as those that put through the Panama Canal, after De Lesseps and France had failed, should map out a plan, and the country should supply the money to carry it out.

FORTUNATELY, the great city of New Orleans is unsinkable. Colonel Ewing, editor of the New Orleans States, quotes the General Jadwin, an expert army engineer, says that as far as the city is concerned all danger is past.

THOSE THAT realize the importance of soil fertility will be interested in Colonel Ewing's casual remark that men, meeting for an hour in a New Orleans office, went up with fifteen hundred feet of the rich soil, deposited by the great river, as richer and deeper than that of Egypt.

SENATOR CAPPER, in his interesting weekly, tells about the biggest pile of pure gold in the world is under a little stone building in Wall Street, New York. A solid piece of the yellow metal in bars like bricks. Each weighs 20 pounds, and is worth $6,000.

The building holds 400 tons, each hundred thousand pounds, of gold.

THERE IS ONE comfort for New York city, in case we never do have an air fleet, and in case a real air fleet should ever visit the city. There will be enough money to load a ship and pay the price to save our biggest city from destruction.

DE PINEDO, the great Italian aviator who flew from Europe to South America, then from South America to North America, is cited when they drink his health in water and called it "American Wine." Even an Italian aviator, now to our ways, knows that the American wine of the moment is bootleg whiskey. UNFORTUNATELY.

WHAT AMAZES the good American probably most is that De Pinedo, who perhaps never drank a glass of pure water in his life, is able to run a flying machine so well. How splendidly he would do it if he were a teetotaler.

CONCERNING Lloyd George's prediction that China would emerge from the present agitation and take her place in the world as "A Great Japan" take notice that Hankow, attacked by its enemies, is already asking the European powers to come to its assistance.

THE CHINESE were civilized, using the compass and shooting off fireworks a thousand years before any proud Nordic could count to one hundred.

But they are philosophical, peaceful, indifferent. They often attack and retreat laughing. This is not a mean weakness. It means a pleasable character. Could make a "Great Japan" out of China when you make a genuine gunpowder out of a lotion cooler.

2 CRUISES TO WEST INDIES

The two special West Indies cruises announced by Canard Line for the Mediterranean trip, which will be made by the Laconia Monarch of Bermuda, of 19,000 tons, are scheduled to start from New York January 28 next on her 24-day winter cruise to the West Indies. Her second cruise to the Spanish Main will start from Boston February 22 next and will be of 17 days' duration.

These two cruises by the liner Montrose, it seems, are the latest in a series of developments which have followed the entrance into the field of Norway-American lines of the Canard Line, which is the result of Norway-American and Canard interests having joined forces some months ago. Last year the Canard Line ran a series of cruises to the Mediterranean, and this year it has added the Laconia Monarch of Bermuda to its fleet.

Accommodations on the Laconia Monarch of Bermuda, one of the finest of Norway-American liners, are limited to 400 first cabin passengers, and the Canard Line claims that this number will be carried on the two cruises announced. The Laconia Monarch of Bermuda is a comparatively new ship, having been launched in 1925. She is 600 feet long and has a gross tonnage of 19,000.

RUNYON SAYS

THERE'S ol' Hank Severeid standing in the shade of the hickory switches for the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast League after hitting beyond .300 and catching every game of the last world's series for the Yanks. Thus the vicissitudes of baseball fate.

I am advised that so far Hank has batted 55 per cent. of the Sacramento club. He was leading the Coast League the last time I took a peek, with an average of .400, which is over his head, of course, although Hankus generally winds up with a fair batting average before the end of a season.

Damon Runyon

How comes Hank Severeid out yonder, you may inquire—and well may you inquire, at that. It is because Sacramento is paying him more money than any of the large league clubs offered him for his services. He was a ten-year man with the American League, and they had to give him his unconditional release when all other major clubs waived claim to him.

He is getting more money in a minor league, if you can properly call a third A baseball term I am ever set before in his baseball life. And Hank is no spring fever in baseball.

I AM told that Hank sold himself to the Sacramento Club, after getting a raise from the Yankees, for $12,500, with a salary of around $5,000. He gets to play in California when I hold is worth at least $100,000, to a man, and I am not a union [illegible] at that. I merely [illegible] card.

Getting Highest Salary Now

Thus, Hank is getting about $17,500 actual money for six months' work, and whatever he may figure the years the California climate will add to his life are worth. Not bad, not bad! No wonder the old boys like to play on the Pacific Coast.

I am told that the owners of the San Francisco Seals are booting themselves up and down Market street every time they see the lineup of the Pittsburgh Pirates and find the name of Lloyd Waner playing left field for the Smoketowners. The Seals gave him his release last season on account of his size. At least, that was the reason given out.

Lloyd Waner is a pretty good ball player, but not good for the Pirates with Ki Ki Cuyler in the middle, as some of the Pittsburgh papers call it.

Waner's Loss Grieves Seals

THEY run alike, and look alike. However, Lloyd is a right handed thrower, while Paul heaves from his port side, as they say both are left-handed hitters, and stand with their bats cocked back of their ears.

They both use the same kind of bottle shaped bat, big at the end, and they seem to be able to hit all kinds of pitching. How many kinds are there? Well, fast balls, slow balls, fork balls, knuckle balls, sinkers, curves, downers, side arm hooks, sailers, fadeaways, emery balls, spit balls, finger nail ball and high balls.

The last, I believe, are the most popular in some of the best circles, but not in baseball. Lloyd Waner has already learned to chew Mail Pouch. I am told, which is the finest one touch to a big leaguer. You can imagine how the owners of the Seals feel when you recall that they got $100,000 for Paul Waner and Hal Rhyne, and not a quarter for Lloyd.

SHARKEY'S PARTNERS GET LOST

Jack Confines Training to Light Gym Work and Telling World He Will Win

By M. FORSCHMIEDT.

New York, May 5.—Jack Sharkey couldn't get any sparring partners to knock around at Lou Stillman's Gym, so he delayed his first real workout in preparation for the May 19 battle with Jim Maloney.

A light workout in the gym, with an admiring throng of well-wishers and curious press men looking, was all that the Boston sailor took the trouble to do, excepting, of course, telling the boys how hard he is going to hit "that guy Maloney" when the two Bostonians meet in the Yankee Stadium.

Telling the public just where and when his opponents get off has gotten to be quite a habit with Josef Paul Cucoskey, alias Jack Sharkey.

He spilled a great line to the boys about his coming fight with Maloney, and while the absence of sparring partners prevented him from getting any of that fat around his waist off, it didn't interfere with his getting his lungs into shape while talking a blue streak. So far as Jack is concerned, it's all over but the shouting.

"Where do they get that stuff about Maloney being the favorite over me," said the ex-Tar, as he chinned with the belpers in Stillman's gym.

"Say, boys, I will make that fellow look like ten cents and you can bet right now that before the fight has gone four rounds they will be laying all sorts of odds on me. I will not only beat him, but I will knock him out. They say he has improved enough to make him a real contender. His bout with Delaney was a joke and beating such fellows like Leo Loch, Diener Persson and George Cook fails to make any impression on me.

"I could lick that bunch in one night. Delaney never wanted any of me and that goes for a lot of them. Jim took a good pasting from me a year ago last December in ten rounds and was lucky to stay. He will not be there for the fifteenth this time.

"In our bout previous to the last one he fouled me in the eighth round when I started to get to him and I have been waiting for this chance for a long time. When I get through with him Jim will be out of the picture for good."

Slattery to Box Kirby on Maloney-Sharkey Card

Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo lightheavy, will show in a ten round, semifinal to the Maloney-Sharkey fight at the Yankee Stadium, May 19. He was signed yesterday to battle Tom Kirby, Boston entry.

Jess McMahon completed two other bouts yesterday. He closed for Johnny Grosso to battle Jim Savage in a four-round tilt. Ernie Schaaf will show in a special six-round go. His opponent is expected to be selected today.

HEENEY SURE OF BOUT WITH MALONEY

Regardless of the outcome of the Jim Maloney-Jack Sharkey fight in the Yankee Stadium, New York, May 19, Maloney will meet Tom Heaney in a bout to be held in Boston under the direction of the Suffolk A. A.

This was decided today at the office of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission when Tom Goodrich matchmaker of the Suffolk A. A. assured Charley Harvey, local promoter importer of foreign talent that the match would be signed right away. Both are going Maloney fared in his coming bout with Jack Sharkey.

Harvey, representing Tom Heaney, appeared before the commission and requested to know positively what chances the Australian boxer had in the mixup concerning his bout with Maloney.

Harvey informed the commission that contracts were signed for the match after Maloney had defeated Jack Delaney and that when Tom Heaney & A. and Dan Carey Jr. of New York & A. and Dan Carey manager of Maloney, had come to an agreement which allows Maloney to meet Sharkey before the Heeney engagement he had no way of knowing whether or not his match with the South Boston heavyweight was to go through.

The commission summoned Goodwin and when the promoter and Harvey came to an agreement the case was dismissed.

Eddie Mack, Arconne A. A. matchmaker, visited the commission today. Both the matchmaker and the local board stated that there were no new developments in the Paul Ino-Ed Keeley mixup.

No Wooden Nickels for Woodchopper Paulino

New York, May 5 (A.P.).—Paulino Uzcudun is willing to fight Jack Dempsey this Summer in a heavyweight elimination bout for a chance at the title, but he wants $75,000 from Tex Rickard as a guarantee that the ex-champion means business in his talk of a comeback.

After a talk with Rickard, Uzcudun agreed to two matches for a recompense of about 20 per cent. of the gate receipts. The first would be a bout with Dempsey at the Yankee Stadium, July 2, and the second, if he wins, would be against the winner of the fight this month between Maloney and Sharkey.

However, the Spaniard interposed the condition that Rickard should post the $25,000 sum to protect him against possible loss through inactivity if the fights do not materialize. Rickard took time to think it over.

The situation is somewhat complicated by the fact Rickard's rival, Humbert Fugazy, already has offered Uzcudun a match with Harry Wills, Negro fighter, at the Polo Grounds, June 30.

One Round Is as Long as Any of His Mates Will Stay in Ring With Jim

By J. D. VAN BRAKLE

Long Branch, N. J., May 5.—Four of Jim Maloney's sparring partners were ready and willing to call it a day after one round each in the ring with the Boston heavyweight battler.

It was the first time since his arrival in Long Branch to prepare for his battle with Jack Sharkey in New York two weeks from tonight that Maloney had the gloves on and he was mighty glad to get back into action. The hall was well filled with spectators.

Maloney opened the day's activities with a round of shadow boxing in the ring to get warmed up. Then [illegible] with [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TRIBE SET TO MEET REDS

Rain and Cold Stop Third Game in Week and End Series With Phillies

By NICK FLATLEY

RAIN robbed the Braves of a chance to pass Stuffy McInnis and his Quakers in the National League parade today, but as the showers gave the new grass on the Wigwam infield a chance to gain health and strength perhaps it was all for the best. The defeat just seems to have vanished as far as the Phils are concerned, but the weather complex has taken its place.

Two clubs had a series scheduled in Philadelphia, but just one game could be played. The Phils won that one out of four was put on here and the Braves followed suit, which makes thing even all around.

FIVE double-headers with the McInnis entry are on the books which should work out to the advantage of the Bancroft brigade. The Phils are going on high just at present, but by the time the postponed pastimes are put on, the representatives of William Penn are more than likely to be some, and the Tribe should do a little easy picking.

Jack Hendricks and his Cincinnati Reds report for an engagement tomorrow, for it is part of the initial Western invasion. These Reds thought they would win the pennant in the spring, but at present they are holding up the whole league. The club has real strength, especially as the box, and will get going. The Braves are hoping to take advantage of the early slump, when it's on.

MANAGER Bancroft intends to keep his team just as it lined up for the opening Quaker game. Joe thinks he has the greatest punch packed in that array, and is sure that his game will collect more games than any team on the home stand.

"We have had the usual Spring troubles," Banny chirps, "colds and sore arms and all that. We've come through, and still are only a couple of games or so from the top. We have the pitching and hitting strength we showed in the south, and are all set now to make a real drive.

"The Braves aren't a pennant team yet, but they ought to collect a lot of trouble. They're better than they have been since I came here, and I have enough reserve material to make shifts if anybody aumps.

"The pitchers, except Joe Genewich, are all in shape. Larry Benton had a lame arm, but that's gone, and he will work against the Reds. Genewich was hit, and his doctor claims he has a fractured rib, although one X-ray didn't show it. We have had more than one, and are waiting to get the verdict.

"But Joe is the only cripple, and without him, we still have plenty of chuckers left to keep any game close, when we score a few runs. I'm going to try Fournier at first for a few days, although Burrus looks better this morning than he ever did. Jack is hitting, and the work will do him good.

"We have been licked other years, because we couldn't come through when any reserves were hurt. Now we have the subs, and I'm boasting when I say I think we'll roll up the best record any Braves team has made for five or six years."

EAST BOSTON C. C. NINE OPENS SEASON SUNDAY

The strong East Boston Catholic Club will open their baseball season on the Immaculate Conception C. C. diamond at Wm. Wat Memorial Park, East Boston.

Jim Kelly and Bill McKenna will be the battery for the East Boston team.

Inside Golf

By CHESTER HORTON

Those who followed me in the starting of the clubhead away from the ball widely with the right should by now be on the threshold of discovering that natural methods with the club are simple and easy methods. It is unnatural methods that make the thing complicated and difficult. The swinging of a club by any good player is proof of the ease of natural methods. There is a muscle sense involved in golf, and the purpose of the directions outlined as to enable you to awaken your muscle sense in your hands. It is true, also, that when you start the clubhead correctly, that is, with control entirely in the hands, that act will in itself nearly enable you to go on with good control of the club throughout.

Honey Cookies—Cream one-half cup shortening with one-half cup granulated sugar. Add one cup of strained honey, the beaten yolks of two eggs, the grated rind of one lemon and three tablespoons of tea and the beaten whites of the two eggs. Add three cups of flour sifted with one teaspoon of soda and one teaspoon of cinnamon. Drop on a buttered pan, smooth over with a moon and bake slowly. One-half cup of shredded cocoanut improves these cookies.

Tea Cakes—Sift one and one-half cups of flour with one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt and two level teaspoons of baking powder. Work in one-half cup of shortening with the finger tips. Beat one egg, saving out a little to brush over the cakes. Add two tablespoons of milk to the egg and add to the dry ingredients.

Shape the dough with your fingers into cakes the size of walnuts. Arrange on buttered tins, leaving space between, brush over with the beaten egg and put a bit in each. Makes fifteen cakes.

Faithfully yours,

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Lately I have been going to a dance hall out in the country. Every evening I went I used to see a certain young man there. Finally we spoke to each other—just formal greetings. Please advise me how I can become acquainted with him. I am very anxious.

BASHFUL SEVENTEEN.

I CANNOT advise you, dear, to cultivate the acquaintance of a young man of whom you know nothing, to whom you have not been introduced. In going without an escort to public dances you are placing a low value on yourself and your friends. The only safe, wise plan leading to happiness is to wait until you are introduced by a responsible person before making the acquaintance of a young man.

LEATHER SUITES

First boil half a pint of linseed oil and when this is quite cold stir in the same quantity of vinegar and mix together thoroughly and apply sparingly to the leather with a flannel, rubbing the liquid well on. Polish with a soft duster. An occasional rubbing with sweet milk is another excellent method of improving the appearance of a leather suite.

The Red Signal — Roger's Reception — By Homer Banks

DETECTIVES VISIT ROGER.—Roger hurried into his dressing gown and swung open the door. Two detectives entered. They glanced around the room with quick, encompassing eyes. "Your name Hope—Roger Hope?" one of them asked. Roger nodded. "Well, get your clothes on," he commanded roughly. "The chief wants to see you down at headquarters." Roger as an attorney knew better than to ask the detectives what was wanted of him. He hastened into his clothing and prepared to leave. As he did the detectives closed in on him.

A SURPRISING ORDER.—One of them drew forth a pair of handcuffs. "Just a minute, sonny," he commanded, "you don't want to go in the street, do you, without your bracelets?" Roger stepped back in dismay. "What does this mean?" he exclaimed "Am I under arrest? If so, where is your warrant? And further more," he added contemptuously, "you won't need those things I'll not try to escape." The detective grunted. "That doesn't mean a thing to me, young fellow," he returned. "I've got my orders"

ROGER IS FIGHTING MAD.—Roger turned hotly on the detectives. "Listen to me," he said. "I'm a reputable attorney, not a crook. If the district attorney wants to see me at headquarters I'll be only too glad to accommodate him. But, as a citizen, I'm not going to submit to any such bulldozing methods as wearing handcuffs. If you want to force them on me, go ahead! We'll make a test case out of it." Roger accompanied the detectives to headquarters. District Attorney Forsythe met him at the door. He ushered him in and then turned and faced him with blazing eyes. (Continued Tomorrow.)

Use of Caffein in Medical Practice

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association.

THE widespread, almost universal use in America of caffein in the forms of either coffee, tea, or "soft drinks," makes it important that your should know something of the uses of coffee in medical practice.

Physicians recognize that coffee stimulates the activity of the nerves and when drunk in excess, rendered these centres abnormal, it increases their excitability.

It is a valuable stimulant in some brain conditions with mental depression.

Its chief value is in the condition of shock, where the nerve centres are so acutely depressed as to endanger the efficiency of the heart.

In opium poisoning, where the nerve centres are so depressed that the vital processes can no longer continue, coffee often will stimulate them until the poison has been eliminated.

Like most stimulants, coffee has a selective effect on particular tissues, although it has same effect on all.

In large doses, in certain sensitive people, it may irritate the lining membranes of the stomach and produce a sensation of heat and burning, possibly because it stimulates the secretion of hydrochloric acid, which is the normal acid of the stomach.

It has a reputation for causing biliousness, which it probably does because it overworks the liver and lessens its capacity for getting rid of poisons.

Its effect on the glands of internal secretion is still obscure, but there is good evidence for believing that it has the same stimulating effect on the thyroid gland as the most extractives. The thyroid regulates the temperature of the human combustion engine, and coffee has been observed in experiments to increase the production of carbonic acid, which means increased combustion. Contrary to popular belief, coffee is not a true heart stimulant.

Its effect on the kidneys is stimulating. As might be expected of a substance which is closely allied to the waste products which it is the business of the kidneys to remove it increases the secretion of urine.

However the most important property of coffee is its stronger stimulation of the nerve centres, and its special field of action is the great collection of nerve centres in the brain, and the centres controlling the nerves which regulate many of the bodily functions such as circulation, secretion, and tissue change.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me who would give the bride away, if the father is dead

If it is at all proper for the mother to do so, I would prefer that to any other way.

G.

INDED it is perfectly proper for the mother or the bride to present her in marriage. And this is quite often done. I think that it is a charming solution for this duty, if the father of the bride is dead. There are three ways this may be done. The mother may walk up the aisle with the bride, just as her father would if he were there to present his daughter in marriage. Or the bride may walk up the aisle with some male relative, a brother, uncle, cousin or even an older friend of the family some old friend of her father, perhaps), and then, at the appropriate time in the ceremony, the mother may come from her seat in the first pew on the left and present her daughter in marriage. The third way is for the bride to come up the aisle alone and then have her mother come from her seat when the clergyman comes to the question, "Who giveth this woman in marriage?"

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Ethel Brown married George White. For personal matters should she be addressed as Mrs. George White or simply Mrs. Ethel White?

A DAILY READER

DO you mean, for instance, [illegible] would an envelope be addressed to her? She should always be addressed on an envelope—whether the envelope is from a business firm or from a very close friend—as Mrs. George White. This is the name too that she uses on her visiting cards. She should never be addressed socially as Mrs Ethel White—this is very bad taste.

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN:

I have been invited to a dance in a fraternity house. It is an informal affair. Each young man is allowed to bring a guest. What would be proper for me to wear?

ANXIOUS

WEAR a light-colored dance frock, in some light-weight material, chiffon or a lace crepe.

Let Your Eyes Express Charm

By Maria Jeritza.

A WOMEN'S eyes take first place among the factors that go to make up her beauty and charm.

It is by her eyes that she is usually remembered by those to whom she gives mental impressions of herself, as we all do each day, to all with whom we come in contact.

Whether your eyes go with blue fire or glow with golden brown warmth, twinkle or flash, they tell a story of the real "you" to every stranger you meet. What a pity that so many feminine eyes fall short of beauty and charm because they are neglected by their owners and permitted to become strained and inflamed.

If you were to gaze at your eyes this moment in a hand glass would you be proud of the reflected picture they would present? Or would you view deeply-circled eyes, with scraggly lashes, inflamed lids, lifeless expression?

Fortunately, all the defects I have mentioned can be overcome by means of attention to rules of good health, sensible grooming and simple, wholesome living.

Your general health determines, primarily, whether your eyes are beautiful. Dark circles may mean that you have neglected your nightly eight hours of restful sleep in a dark room, that you have over-exhausted your nerves through worry and excess of stimulants. Or the hollows may mean that you need the advice of your family physician because your system is out of order. Hollows under a woman's eyes are always a symptom of something that needs setting right in her health or mode of living.

If you are eating wisely, drinking an abundance of fresh water, getting at least two hours out of doors each day—in fact, following all the simple rules of sane living we know so well and so often neglect, the chances are that your eyes are clear and vivid in coloring and delightful to look at.

Eye strain, that enemy of feminine loveliness, can be avoided even by the woman who must use her eyes constantly at close work. Make it a point to read and do fine work by a clear, steady, but not dazzling light. Avoid pink and red shades. Green or gold-colored parchment makes a good light shade. Clear daylight coming over the left shoulder is best of all.

When your eyes feel tired, sponge the lids with, first, warm then cold water, or, if you prefer, with alum astringent cotton dipped in cold water than in pure sea de cologne. When they are tired in the morning, which should not occur if you retire for them properly—wash [illegible] with an eye-cup containing [illegible] acid solution, which can be had at any drug store

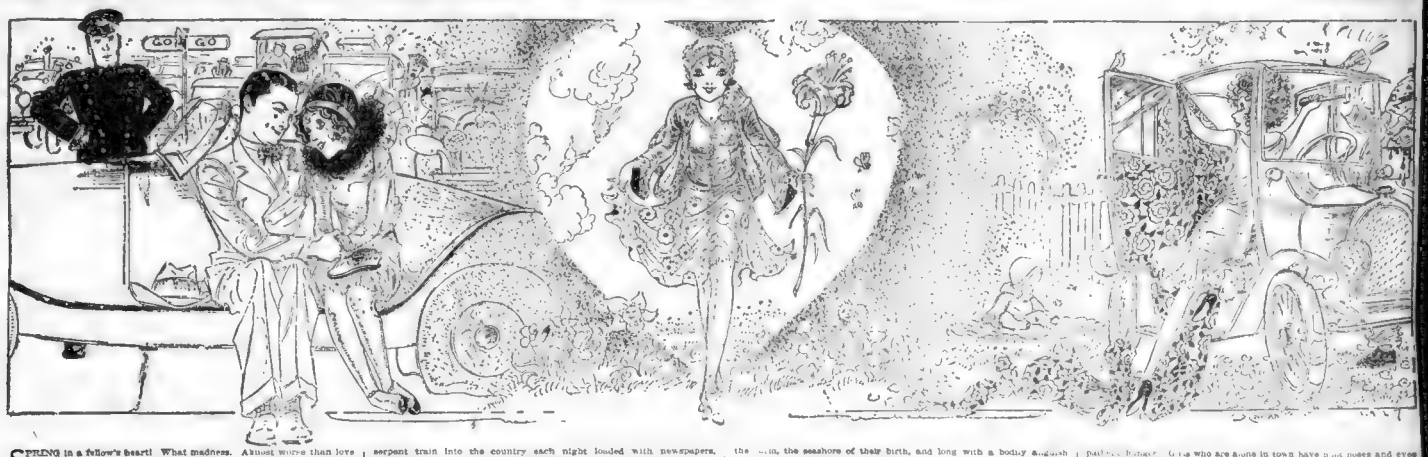
Spring!---Look What She Makes a Fellow Do!

DRAWN BY
Nell Brinkley



SPRING is a fellow's heart! What madness. Almost worse than love —for dizziness. And all the time Love's in it—which makes it doubly worse.

The towner gets a fever for flower-boxes. The man who rides the perpent train into the country each night loaded with newspapers, bundles, magazines, suddenly gets unbalanced over garden seeds.

Little school-teachers suddenly grow as weary of their "riddles" as the youngsters do of them, and remember the prairies, the mountains, the seashore of their birth, and long with a bodily anguish for to go there. So they go to the museum, the park, or a concert to sing the fever.

Young men who are strangers in the city see girls with honest, partly-honest faces who are alone in town have pink noses and eyes on holidays and so decide to make friends with the first festive young man who ever came along. What Spring makes persons do! Spring fever is no hoax.—NELL BRINKLEY.

"Hollywood Girl"; Story of a New England Miss in Movie Colony

CHAPTER LXII.

On the first Saturday afternoon in June Bobbie went to the cashier of the Magnifico Film Company and received her first big check.

"It's big to me, at any rate," she said to herself, looking at the words, "Exactly One Hundred and Fifty Dollars," written across the face of it.

Of course, it wasn't big when you compared it with some of the stars' salaries—with the salary of Joan Joyce, for instance. Joan's pittance was $5,000 a week, and she managed to keep gloriously in debt on it.

"Still, 150 buckerinos isn't so bad!" thought Bobbie. "I used to work weeks teaching school to make that much."

Strange, she thought, that she did not feel more thrilled about making that much money. Strange that she did not feel more light-hearted now that her money troubles were at an end.

She walked home, and the first place she looked when she unlocked the front door was on the hall table where Mrs. Mangan always left the boarders' letters.

There was none for her. But there was a slip of brown paper upon which Mrs. Mangan had scrawled in her crooked, cramped writing: "MacCloud telephoned you and will telephone us again about 6 o'clock."

That meant that he expected her to be right there, glued to the phone, waiting for it to ring at 6 o'clock, and Bobbie knew it.

"Orders from the King of Siam!" she said to herself, making a little face. "I'll show him he can't boss me around, and tell me where to be at 6 o'clock!"

She unhooked the receiver and went upstairs, leaving it to hang uselessly upon its cord beside the telephone.

At 6 o'clock when Gus had said he would phone, the receiver was still hanging there.

Bobbie thought wickedly of Gus, trying in vain to get her on the wire from his house up in Beverly Hills.

"I'll teach him!" she told herself firmly. "He sure does get on my nerves sometimes with his overbearing ways."

If she had had a mother, she could have told her that a man who "gets on a girl's nerves" before marriage hasn't a ghost of a chance of making her contented and happy afterward. Not if he is as rich as Rockefeller, as handsome as Jack Barrymore, and as good as gold.

At six forty-five, the evening stillness of Las Palmas street was broken by the loud bleat of an automobile horn.

Bobbie, curled up on the bed in her pink muslin kimono, heard it and started up.

She ran to the window, barefoot, and looked out. Below, in his dark-green roadster, sat her husband-to-be, looking just as cross as a man can look.

He saw her and called up to her: "Hell, what's the matter with everybody down here? Are you all deaf or what?"

His love smiled down at him with an innocent sweet smile like the Blessed Damozel's when she looked down from the gold bar of heaven.

"I'm sure I'm not deaf, Gusty," she answered with that same innocent sweetness. "Wait a minute. I'll ask Mrs. Mangan if she is."

She went to the head of the stairs and peered down into the twilight of the hall below, where she was pretty sure Mrs. Mangan was listening.

She was. She glanced up when she saw Bobbie.

"I was just standing here—" she began guiltily.

"I know," the girl answered. "Ask Mr. MacCloud to come in for a minute, will you, please? I'll be right down as soon as I slip into something. And don't tell him the receiver was off the hook."

Gus was still scowling like a spoiled boy when she went down to the living room ten minutes later in a slender little tube of white crepe de chine and a tiny red straw helmet pulled down over her hair.

"You look as if you were expecting to go out somewhere," he said crossly in answer to the radiant smile she gave him.

"Well, aren't we? You don't want to spend the evening in Mrs. Mangan's sitting room, do you?" She could imagine an evening there, with the dismal Erkin peeking in at them, and Mrs. Mangan eavesdropping!

He got up slouchily and they went out into the violet twilight of California.

"That's not it," he said sullenly when they were in the car. "We haven't any place to go, except to some dinky restaurant where there are a million people gaping at us. You won't go up to my house, and you won't take a house or a little flat when I could come to see you. That's the last of my moving into a flat if we're going to get married!" thought Bobbie, but she said nothing.

It was better not to argue with Gus when he was in a mood like this.

In silence they drove to a roadhouse called "The Green Mill" on the road to the beaches.

They looked for all the world like a married couple who aren't on speaking terms as they sat across the table from each other, eating fried chicken and waffles and green apple pie.

But out on the wide white road again, under the lanes of stars, they sat close to each other. And, as the spangled lights at Ocean Park and Venice came into view against the north, Gus put one arm around Bobbie's shoulders and drew her to him, and her head went back against his shoulder.

The car slackened its headlong speed, and almost stopped. Running along the edge of the road at five miles an hour, they kissed each other as if there never had been any lover like a quarrel between them.

It was always like that between them, although Bobbie had not yet figured it out.

No matter how she might dislike Gus in her ordinary dealings with him—and sometimes she did dislike him very, very much—she forgot it when he put his arms around her and held her tight and told her how much he loved her. She forgot it all when they were like this—locked in each other's arms, out under the stars and the moon.

And suppose they didn't get along very well together as friends, and never had? They got along famously as sweethearts, and that was the important thing, wasn't it?

"Just think what pals Andy and I were," thought Bobbie in Gus MacCloud's arms. "I always got along with him like a rubber duck—but I never fell in love with him. Maybe a girl never does get along so swimmingly with the man she's in love with. Maybe it's because she loves him too much."

That was how she thought it all out!

Then there came a night a week later when Gus, as a sweetheart and lover, failed to appeal to her for the first time.

She was in Roy Schultz's office about nine o'clock, after a long, hard day of "shooting."

"Come on up," he had said to her five minutes before, when they left the set together. "I want to show you something."

The "something" was a picture of her in a motion-picture magazine—one of the very magazines that she had been reading for years and years! It seemed too wonderful to be true! It couldn't be true!

"Why, Roy Schultz! A story about me in a magazine!" she was saying to him breathlessly, when the door of his office burst open and Gus came in.

He stood looking first at her and then at Roy Schultz.

"Well," he said heavily, after a minute, "what have you to say for yourselves?"

They looked at one another and laughed. They both saw, at once, that he was jealous and suspicious of them because he had found them alone. And Roy saw that he had been drinking, too.

But Bobbie didn't.

"Why, Gusty," she said as lightly as she could, "what should we do? Apologize for being here at this midnight hour of nine o'clock? Really, you needn't suspect me and Roy of anything. We're quite harmless. Look here—"

She stood up, white and starlike in her glittering white dress, and held the magazine before him so that he could see the picture of her in it.

But he raised his fist and struck the book violently to the floor.

She opened her lips to speak, but Roy shook his head and came around the corner of his desk.

"Leave this to me," he said quietly.

"Forbidden Lips"; We're Alone at Last, Says Lupino

ee. And yet—with a sinking reluctance—she admitted to herself that Lupino did, in fact, possess the lordly, swaggering strength of a robber baron, the swash-buckling bravery of a conscienceless pirate who could scuttle a ship, murder his crew, and carry off the prettiest as his share of the loot. Against him Red Suggs or any of the other ransomed gangsters was no match.

"You're too fresh, Lupino, and some day you're goin' to find yourself a corpse," Suggs said sarcastically. "After all, I didn't come here to monkey around your woman—we're after the stuff, and that's our business."

"Now you're talkin', Red!" Tony approved. "Let's get to it."

"What'll we do with Lupino and the girl while we're lootin' the trucks?"

"Lock 'em up in this room and leave 'em," Tony suggested. "One of your keys will fit the door."

"All right, all right," Red said impatiently. "Let's get the stuff movin'. Come on."

The men started to move out of the room.

And Jacqueline realized, almost immediately, she would be alone with Lupino . . . they had said something about leaving them locked up in the house all night. A desperate plea sprang to her lips. . . .

"For God's sake, won't you let me out of here? Don't leave us locked in this place. It's too terrible!"

Red Suggs looked at her for a moment with his fishy eyes. "Aw, what you worryin' about? We're not goin' to leave you here to die of starvation. We ain't such rotten guys as all that. Tomorrow morning, first thing, we'll telephone the Spook and he'll come and let you out. It's just for tonight, girlie—we're just playing safe with ourselves."

"Oh, please . . ."

"That's all right, Red. Don't pay any attention to her," Lupino cut in "She's excited."

But Red Suggs, the last of the trio of gangsters to leave the room, closed the door behind them and there was the sound of a key turning in the lock, the pads of their feet on the carpet as they trooped down the hall, down the stairs

Jacqueline raised her wide, staring eyes, burning and tearless. Lupino was taking off his hat and topcoat . . . the room had a dull, hot heat. His eyes, now, had lost the last trace of their ferocity, were smoldering with a dark, pecuniar fire

Alone at last! he said under his breath. "We're alone at last, Jacqueline."

Ways of Getting Thing You Want

By LUCY LOWELL

EVERY afternoon at 4 o'clock you hear him if you're within a half-mile of where he lives.

He bruises his long, raggedy-coated legs, points his muzzle at the sky and gives vent to his feelings in a sort of Morse code: four short, sharp yelps and three long ones.

Over and over. Four short and three long yelps, gathering power as he goes along till each comes like a small explosion and everything rattles.

And somebody says, "For goodness sake, find out what that dog wants and give it to him and tell him to shut up."

And what he wants is his supper, 4 being the hour for that.

No some member of the family rushes around at what to him seemingly and precious his supper—no light task, for Pat, the airedale, is a fastidious eater.

And when it just isn't possible to do this on the dot he is keen to be about into the coal cellar [illegible] hour. He is most unhappy there, but the ears of the neighborhood are saved.

Now, the method of Bobby Burns, the collie, is very different.

He knows when 4 o'clock comes quite as well as does Pat and he is just as eager for food.

But instead of telling the world about it he parks himself in some conspicuous place, puts his nose on his paws and fixes mournful eyes up on the face of someone. He never makes a sound and does nothing, in fact, but manage that look of pleading.

And when the canine supper is prepared someone is almost sure to say, "Look at that dog, how patient he is. How willing to give in rather than insist on it!

But, as I say, it is likely to end up in the coal cellar.

Fellow Fidos, on the other hand, is a master of tact. He is quite as persistent as the airedale, but he makes no noise about it. He manages, in a subtle manner, to make you want to give him what he wants. What a time saver he would make if he were but a human!

The noisy way isn't always the effective one. Silence has its important place.

Trilby trim are the three-piece costumes that are the rage for Spring. Simple frocks of satin, flat crepe or taffeta are accompanied by short jackets, many of which are snugly fitted at the hips and bloused above.

Blooming Beautiful over both lame square and the very deep silk fringe that borders it, large gaily colored flowers form a charming printed design. Folded on the bias, this shoulder shawl is very effective to wear when dancing, for the printed fringe is doubly charming when seen in motion.

HOW CAN WOMEN KEEP WELL ENOUGH TO GET UP SINGING?

MRS. BELLE THOMPSON
3707 E. 44TH ST., EAST LAKE, TENN.

Springtime streamed in through the open windows. The green fields of Georgia were basking in the sunshine. Somewhere a bird was trilling. It was a day to be happy.

But the pale woman at the table sighed and pushed away her plate. Nothing tasted right. She couldn't eat much. She couldn't sleep well, either. She was so weak, it was hard to do her work. When the baby cried, she wanted to cry, too.

She had not been well for four years. Her husband watched her with a man's helpless expression. But his mother knew a remedy.

"My mother-in-law," says Mrs. Belle Thompson, 3101 E. 44th St., East Lake, Tenn., "told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children, and in ways after the babies came I had to take treatment, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does more good than the treatments. It lowers me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to tell you about how both of the medicines have helped me."

Another Happy Woman

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. Jennie Bontrager, 611-11th St., Union City, N. J.

This dependable medicine has been in use for over fifty years.

DAILY SHORT STORY

FEUD

By LOUISE PEPLE ARMSTRONG

MARY ARNETT and Elizabeth Chesley had not spoken to each other for over thirty years. They lived side by side in modest, immaculately kept white cottages in the little village of Sandston—things they had inherited from their respective fathers. Once a day each dainty lady set forth to market, with a basket on her arm, they always met at the end of the lane, where the dusty highway turns into the village street. Always they stared blankly at each other, then Mary Arnett took the right side of the road, while Elizabeth Chesley flounced over to the left.

Years ago they had been dear friends. Indeed, they had been inseparable, until the night Daniel Ross had brought Lizbeth Chesley home from prayer-meeting.

Now, there was nothing reprehensible in the fact that Elizabeth had accepted his escort. Daniel was a handsome youth in those days tall, slender and dark-haired, with a smouldering fire in the depths of his large brown eyes. He had shown marked devotion to little Mary Arnett, so marked that hosts in the village nodded and old folks smiled understandingly. It was always strange to observe how will, impetuous young maidens settled meekly down under a gentle, feminine hand.

Daniel had worshipped the ground upon which Mary Arnett walked, and though at first she was appalled and rather frightened, later she came to look in the light of such a perfect devotion with a new, what an air of triumph, especially when she observed what a sensation her conquest had caused. Rumor had all but announced their engagement, when an early evening shower caught Elizabeth Chesley in her best bonnet without an umbrella, before the door of the church.

Elizabeth had darted back into the night. "O, dear! how can I get home in distress. "What shall I do in this the Wilkinses?" For a while she hesitated to speak to the minister alone, Sunday's manse.

"I'll be glad to see you home, Miss Elizabeth," a voice came from the darkness.

She had turned to see Daniel Ross on the steps, grinning placidly.

"Bad night, remarked Daniel briefly, as he got in beside her and grasped the reins. Then he called sharply to the horse and they were off down the deserted street.

Elizabeth was by nature a conversationalist; she had the art of keeping the light ball of small talk tossing to and fro and because of a shy humor she possessed her most casual remarks were quaintly amusing.

Daniel, turning after a moment to smile at what he said, was astonished at the picture she made, her piquant face framed with rumpled gold baby curls on which the rays of street lights gleamed. Why, Elizabeth was a whopping little beauty when she smiled like that!

She had been blind, however, to the frank admiration in his dark eyes, the devils of mischief lurking there, for she knew little of the ways of young men, never having been permitted to accept their attentions. But she was thinking then that Daniel, so much in love with her best chum, was a rather attractive fellow. She was pleased when she had made him laugh out, she was strangely thrilled when he stopped the horse to tuck the blanket more snugly about her feet.

The rain had ceased, and the moon shone suddenly from behind the bank of clouds which had obscured it. Daniel had bent swiftly, and before she realized what he was about seized her and kissed her on the mouth.

Then, beyond the hedge that divided their lawns, Elizabeth Chesley saw a white figure dart onto the Arnett porch, heard the sound of a stifled sob.

Of course Mary Arnett had sent Daniel away. Her reproaches had cut him so bitterly that he left the village and went to the city, to forget her as she had commanded him to do. And Mary refused to speak to her best girl friend after that.

For a time, crushed with grief and remorseful without reason, Elizabeth Chesley had been eager to explain, to make Mary see that she had been innocent of any disloyalty, had never thought of Daniel as an admirer. But at length she, too, grew to feel herself wronged. She had been held up to the village as heartless, a flirt. She had indignantly denied Mary's charges to her friends and finally she came to ask in silence.

Today the sun shone brightly and its light fell through the rustling leaves overhead in gay moving patterns on the roadway. Many people passed along into the village on business, for it was Court Day, and the streets would be thronged with the vehicles of farmers and their wives from the surrounding countryside. As the two women, each on her own side of the road, turned the bend in the way a low swung touring car flashed like a crimson streak past them to stop a few feet ahead. A young man driving the car looked back and grinned engagingly.

"Can't I take you two ladies the rest of the way into town?" he asked.

There was a twinkle in the youngster's brown eyes, the corners of his mouth twitched, although his face remained grave. "Come now," he said, "of course I'm a stranger, but why be so formal?" And besides, my Dad came from this town, and I guess he knew you both—he often said he knew everyone in Sandston. His name was Daniel Ross."

Mary Arnett gulped and clutched her basket convulsively, and Elizabeth Chesley blinked rather foolishly. For an instant they regarded each other in silence. Then Mary seemed to take herself firmly in hand. She turned to the lad, who held the door of the car open invitingly. "So Daniel Ross married?" she asked in a queer tone.

"I should say so! I'm Daniel, Junior, there are seven of my brothers and sisters at home. Do you really know Dad?"

"Of course," replied Mary drily, "we both know him—very well, boy! Come Elizabeth!" And Mary Arnett climbed into the back seat of the car with alacrity.

Still in a daze, Elizabeth climbed in after her, sank into the cushioned seat with a sigh. "It's a long way," she ventured with a timid smile at Mary, "walking alone!"

A suspicion or mixture came into Elizabeth Chesley's eyes. "Mary, I've always wanted to tell you—wanted to explain, you see, Daniel—"

"Hush!" commanded Mary Arnett in stern tenderness. "What does it matter now? Eight children—oh, dear!"

David Copperfield

By Charles Dickens

STEERFORTH, David's friend, who had accompanied him to the Peggotty's, fell in love with Little Emily. He persuaded her to desert her fiance, Ham, the young fisherman, and run away with him. Old Peggotty, believing Steerforth would not marry her, followed them.

DAVID'S Aunt Betsey lost her fortune, which had been entrusted to Mr. Wickfield, the lawyer. David, finding himself obliged to support himself, turned to writing as a career. He longed for the time when he would have enough money to marry Dora Spenlow.

AS soon as David's writings gave him an income sufficient to support Dora he married her. He called her his child-wife and they lived in a little cottage outside of London, where Agnes Wickfield often visited them. Dora was an impractical but lovable little person.

DORA was not strong and some time later she became ill and died in the arms of Agnes Wickfield. David was grief-stricken, but he could not give way to his sorrow because of several other dramatic happenings that followed.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

SEVERAL Metropolitan Opera stars attribute their success to the fact that they used to sing in their tubs.

THIS shows you how easy it is to become a great singer. All you have to do is to take enough baths.

THE more you wash, the quicker you'll be a success.

ONE woman scrubbed herself to fame in three years.

SHE sings hot and cold songs.

ALL the well known operas are now being printed on wash rags.

A CHICAGO man says he's so anxious to become a good singer that he can hardly wait for Saturday.

HE'S bound to be successful. He's studying under one of the best plumbers in the country.

HE can go through the whole score of "Rigoletto" without touching a faucet.

THE only difficulty he had was with the high notes. They leaked out of the tub.

AFTER he finished singing the opera, his valet went into the bathroom and found him standing up in the tub taking bows.

THE people upstairs were pounding on the floor and he thought it was applause.

THIS rubber sheet around the shower was worn out. He had taken three hundred curtain calls.

BUT he had achieved his goal. He could now be a success in anybody's bathtub.

HE had washed himself into the hearts of the public.

TWO thousand cakes of soap had been his stepping stones to fame and fortune.

SINGERS who are still struggling for recognition should hop into a tub knowing that every cloud has a porcelain lining.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS---BY HELEN ROWLAND

IT takes the average man about six minutes to fall in love; but it takes him six months to discover it—and six months more to admit it.

* * *

"It has been six months since I stopped writing her," writes a cautious lover, "but, now I know that I LOVE her—and nothing else matters!"

Now, isn't that just like a man?

HE loves her—so "nothing else matters!" He has only to tell her the glad, sweet news, and it's all settled, except picking out the wedding decorations.

* * *

"Nothing else matters!" It does not matter that she may have worn out the hall rugs, running to the door, looking for that letter that never came!

* * *

It does not matter that the rose and gold may have gradually faded out of her rainbow dream, and the halo fallen off his image.

It does not matter that he may have hurt her pride, stung her vanity, and left her all crumpled up with an inferiority-complex.

It does not matter that she may have lain awake nights, wondering whether she preferred cyanide or prussic acid, and how she would look in a shroud.

* * *

It does not matter that she may have quivered as she visualized him kissing another girl's hair or sampling a series of lipsticks.

* * *

It does not matter that she may have gone all the way to Purgatory and back again! Or that she may have forgotten him in a week—and found SOMEBODY ELSE!

* * *

He has fought the good fight—and lost! He can't be happy without her!

* * *

Now he's all ready to unite himself from a lot of other girls, and tie himself up to her. He has counted the leaves on the daisy, and it has come out, "I love her." Oh, you lucky little woman!

* * *

Why is a man's love supposed to be a delicate thing like an orchid, that has to be carefully nursed and cultivated; while a woman's love is supposed to be an air-plant, which can live forever on nothing?

* * *

Why does a man always seek the Boat of Happiness by trying to leap out of it in midstream?

* * *

Why do nine men out of ten cheerfully fling away the Biggest Thing in life—and then howl to Heaven because they never can find it again? Life is too swift, these days, for most girls to bother with broken hearts. They just stop long enough to pick up the pieces and go around looking for some clever heart-mender.

Investors Warned Against Orgy of Foreign Issues

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Have American banking firms always enough at stake when they sell foreign security issues to American investors? Frankly, there have been offerings which suggested that the bankers—or brokers—had more eager to pocket profits for themselves than to supply the public with trustworthy investments.

* * *

CONDITIONS HAVE made it easy for American houses to take hold of blocks of foreign bonds and pass every dollar of them on to the public, having nothing on their own hands but the fat commissions. Under such circumstances a drop in the market value of the securities entailed no financial loss to the issuing firm.

B. C. Forbes

It is my conviction that a day of reckoning is bound to come, a day when unsuspecting investors will receive painful shock concerning the real merit of certain of their foreign holdings, with the consequence that there will arise a loud and bitter outcry against some of the practices which have been perpetrated without authoritative protest.

AT LAST a J. P. Morgan & Co. partner, Thomas W. Lamont, has issued a word of warning against the scramble of American banker-brokers to "land" foreign bonds and stocks for fatalistic sale. Foreigners are actually being coaxed and implored to pile up debts in this country by accepting millions of dollars in exchange for paper obligations. Says Mr. Lamont:

"I have in mind the reports that I have recently heard of American bankers and firms competing on almost a violent scale for the purpose of obtaining loans in various foreign money markets previously. Naturally, it is a tempting thing for certain of the European governments to float a horde of American bankers sitting on their doorsteps offering them money. It is rather demoralizing for municipalities and corporations in the same countries to have money pressed upon them.

"That sort of competition tends to insecurity and unsound practice. The American investor is an intelligent individual and can be relied upon to discriminate. Yet in the first instance much discrimination surely is the province of the banker who buys the goods rather than of the investor who has to be sold them. It may be accused of special pleading in uttering a warning, but the warning needs to be given against indiscriminate borrowing."

HOW RAPIDLY the dollars of American investors are flowing into other countries is revealed by figures compiled by the war loan department of Commerce. Between the armistice of November, 1919, and the end of 1926, the total reached $6,984,991,000.

Note, however, how the outflow has been swelling in volume. In 1927, the total was $377,000,000. In 1926 it was $628,000,000. In 1925 $374,000,000. Last year, it was more than $1,000,000,000. In the first quarter of this year the outflow was at th erate of $1,500,000,000. While the end of the month records reached broken, with a total in excess of $200,000,000.

* * *

IT WILL COST foreign borrowers—including governments, $1,000,000,000 a year to meet interest and sinking fund requirements of the money already borrowed—Beechnut a amount is rapidly increasing, as already shown. Mr. Lamont justifiably asks, concerning these foreign borrowers, "Will their exports so far exceed their imports that they can continue, except by continuous fresh borrowing, to transfer the sums necessary for interest and sinking fund?"

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON: 1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND: 1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

We Turn to "Snooping"

What Is YOUR Opinion of This New Use of Our State Constabulary?

If the Littlefield pink takes on a little more color down Abington way this year, it may be because of the testimony by officers of the State Constabulary that they were compelled to resort to the methods of the "spotters" in order to get evidence against the proprietors of a roadhouse.

TWO State constables testified in the Second District Court that they "picked up" a Providence girl and took her to the Hazelwood Inn with them; and that they bought gin there.

Two more constables offered testimony that THEY "picked up" two Boston girls and went to the inn with them; and that while they bought no liquor on the premises they did play the slot machine.

The raid took place in April. Red and white wines were confiscated.

If liquor has been sold in the Hazelwood Inn, we hope the sellers will be punished as they ought to be. If the house has been maintaining a thieving slot machine, we hope it will be broken into kindling wood in a legal manner.

But this newspaper does not contemplate with any happy emotion such use of the young men of the State Constabulary as is indicated by this testimony in the court at Abington.

If we must endure for a time the sneaking and snooping methods which in some jurisdictions have been employed by Federal enforcement officers, let Massachusetts, at least, be free of them on her own account. Abington is no impoverished hamlet, but a smart shoe town of 6,000 people. Let her keep her own house clean. MAKE her keep it clean; and let the State Constabulary be about better business.

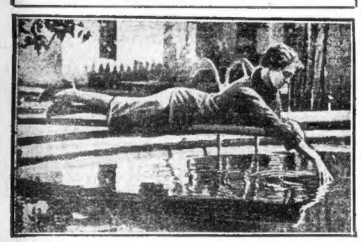
There was once a famous resident of Abington, who, in his latter days, was one of the most stalwart champions of total abstinence in all the land.

John L. Sullivan, along towards the end, was NO friend of the whiskey peddler, but none of the four young officers who took their "pickups" to the Hazelwood would have stood up before the "big fellow" five minutes to listen to his roaring denunciation of "spotter evidence."

Cut it out!

A Lady Narcissus

All Right for Girls, Bad for Men



ROSAMOND PINCHOT, AT THE POOL.

You know the sad story of Narcissus. An unfortunate youth, he was the victim of circumstances and of his VANITY. According to Greek mythology he was beloved by the beautiful nymph Echo, one of the most interesting young ladies in mythology.

Juno, whom the ancients called Queen of Heaven, wife of the great and highest god Jupiter, had lovely Echo for one of her attendants. But poor Echo, who fell in love with Narcissus and was disdained by him, talked too much. So Juno changed her into what we call an echo, and her fate was that she must never speak until another had spoken, and never be silent after another had spoken to her. You may have heard her voice echoing back from the mountainside.

She pined so much about Narcissus' refusal to love her that she simply faded away until nothing was left of her but the voice. That's our modern echo.

Narcissus, on the other hand, was punished by the gods for not paying more attention to Echo. He looked into the water, fell in love with his own face, died, and on the spot where he died, at the edge of the water, there grew the flower that we call the narcissus. It also bends over and looks into the water for a little while, then dies.

But to return to this interesting picture of a fine, young and very much alive American girl.

This shows the intelligent and beautiful Rosamond Pinchot, daughter of Amos Pinchot, who is remarkable in three ways.

First, he is rich and money doesn't spoil him or prevent his thinking unselfishly.

Second, he is rich, and it doesn't keep him from interesting himself in those that are poor; quite the contrary.

Third, when his daughter wanted to go on the stage in "The Miracle" to play the part of the nun, instead of sitting around waiting for somebody to come and marry her, as daughters of rich men usually do, Mr. Pinchot gave his consent. Miss Pinchot is also the niece of Mr. Gifford Pinchot, recently Governor of Pennsylvania, one of the sincerest, best men in public life.

Now once more to return to the fair Rosamond, who you see in the picture above.

After she had been on the stage for awhile, and had there got rid of some youthful enthusiasm and surplus energy, she wisely decided that she would rest her body and work her brain. She left the stage, being rich enough to afford it, although successful, went to the University of California to study in earnest.

The next thing for this young woman to do is to get married, if she can find a husband worthy of her.

CONCERNING WALL STREET VIEWS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

MR. JASON WESTERFIELD, director of publicity of the New York Stock Exchange, in a recent address said:

"We pity primitive people who personalize the destructive elements of nature, and yet this tendency has been shown by so-called civilized men of today who believe that the 'demons of Wall Street' are plotting day and night to rob the poor and destroy the nation."

It is quite the style and somewhat the popular thing to abuse Wall Street, to claim that it is some kind of a bogey man that is constantly plotting against the welfare of the people. To talk of criminal wealth and malefactors of great wealth is quite the style.

Unfortunately there have been examples of men of great wealth who have not done right, but where there is one rich man who has broken the laws there are probably twenty poor men who have done the same thing.

A man can accumulate wealth in this country, as a rule, only by observing the laws; in fact he becomes wealthy because he does observe the laws. He adjusts himself to the conditions of society. He knows how to play the game because he is always going along with the stream. He has no fanatical theories that involve him in useless antagonism to the views of his fellow men.

Wall Street is nothing but a market and the greatest market in the world for the exchange of securities. There money is handled in great lumps. A man's reputation for truth and honesty is nowhere at a greater premium. Men constantly risk their fortunes upon the word or even the nod of their competitors and they are rarely betrayed.

The standard of morality among stock brokers from a commercial point of view is as high as in other quarters.

It is necessary for the country to have some market for the exchange and sale of its securities.

Wall Street was not imposed upon the country by the government, but has grown up naturally. It exists to meet a real want. It answers the purposes for which it has grown admirably and the standard of truth and honesty there is as good as it is in other sections of the country.

Some object to Wall Street because its inhabitants are called cold-blooded and heartless. The same objection is made to bankers generally. But when you put your money in a bank you want it taken care of by a man who is not a sentimentalist, but who is extremely practical, and you usually select as custodian for your accounts the cold-blooded man and not the warm-hearted mixer.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"DO you think one can ever recover lost ideals?" asks Myra.

Then she tells a long tale of unhappy childhood and of a love affair which absorbed her, body and spirit, for eighteen years.

"He was my ideal," she cries. "I lived but for him and pinned all my faith and hope in him."

But as our clay-gods so often do, he failed her.

And now she wonders if "one can ever recover a lost ideal."

Hardly ever, Myra. And it's a mighty good thing we can't. Why? Here's why.

In the first place, most of our ideals aren't ideals at all. They're just fixations. They are something upon which we have fixed our desire—something upon which we have pinned our hopes as you pinned your hopes on this man. They are gratifications, and we glorify them by calling them ideals.

It's very easy to bunk oneself into thinking that the thing we want is the supremely good thing—psychologists call this bunkum process "rationalizing." Rationalizing means the self-justification of a certain act or attitude which may seem unjustifiable to the rest of the world.

Want Very Much

Most of our ideals are based on such rationalization.

We want something very much. We want it because it adds color and action to our lives. We are sure that if it does this, it must be good for us. So We forthwith make a fetish of this desire. We feel that it is right that we should have this thing; that God has meant that we should always have it; that it has been set like a star in the sky to guide us.

As a matter of fact most ideals are anything but stars in the sky. They are much more nearly related to a pain in the neck.

Take Myra's ideal, for example.

Myra says she knows he was her ideal because she "was so happy with him and all the world seemed better." The same might be said of almost any good whiskey, but Myra doesn't realize that fact. She feels that something beautiful and right has been unfairly taken from her and she hates God and Man because of that. But how beautiful and right was this love? Not beautiful or right at all. Her lover was a married man, who either could not or would not divorce his wife. They led a life of miserable deception for fifteen years. Their brief moments of happiness were based on constant disorder and misery. Yet Myra insisted that this was on "ideal" condition, when at any moment she might have seen the inevitable tragic ending if she had been willing to see it. But she wasn't willing. She wanted to fool herself and she did.

Smash Comes

We humans do things like that and we're sincere when we do them.

Then the smash comes. But the smash won't hurt us if we'll use our heads after we have recovered from the shock.

Our "ideals" may break—and it's a good thing that most of them do break—but that won't prevent us from forming new and better ideals. Life hasn't failed us simply because a few of our fool bunches have gone wrong. Truth and Justice aren't tottering on their thrones because we placed our bets on the wrong number. God's in his sky even if Bill Jones has skidded off the highway.

So pick yourself up, sister, dust off the dirt and shake and take another start. And try to make an ideal this time that is a little larger than your small personal desire, and an aim that is taller than some puny human. Then maybe you won't come such a cruel cropper.
